They are then caught by the neck with the lett hand, while with the right hand you draw over the head a stocking thus blindfolding them. At the bottom of the stocking is left a bole through which their beak passes, giving them an opportunity to breathe. As soon as the bird is blindfolded he is held still by four men, and in about half an hour he is plucked. The white feathers are all cut, while the body and tail feathers are plucked. I tell you there is an immense future to this enterprise, as the demand for ostrich feathers is ever on the increase. Ostrich feathers are always fashionable. If you watch this as closely as I have done, you will discover that there is a rage for ostrich tips at different times all over the world, whether it be in colonies, in the United States or in Europe, In five years from now ostrich farming will be the leading industry, and in ten years from now it will be a staple industry of the United States.

Regarding the omission of carbonic acid and the absorption of oxygen by leaves kept in darkness, Deherain and Maquenne observe that in Euonymus japonica, the plant selected for experiment, the carbonic acid given off exceeds the oxygen absorbed. Thus the respiratory phenomena of leaves consist not merely in a transformation of the oxygen absorbed into carbonic acid, but also in the production of carbonic acid from internal consumptions similar to those which take rise in fermentations.

FACETLE.

THE other day a young housewife left her home in this city to spend a few days with several lady, friends in husband, and told him that he could help himself whenever he was hungry. He took lunch down town and went home in the evening for dinner.

As he tells the story, he found cold chicken, cold butter, cold pie, cold milk, cold salt, cold mustard, and several other cold dishes, but with all that he was not entirely satisfied, and hunted high and low for something else. At first he did not know what it was, but finally concluded he wanted bread. He knew there was some in the house, but could not find it. Finally he concluded to telegraph his wife, for he could not live without bread Accordingly a telegram asking "Where is the bread?" was despatched.

The wife received it in the midst of a number of ladies, and it frightened her nearly to death. With the cry, "I knew it was bad news; I know Mr. B— is killed!" she felf in a faint. The ladies present cried from sympathy, and a most lugubrious scene presented itself when the man of the house happened in. What's the matter here?" he asked. "Mrs. B's husband has been killed and she has fainted," was the reply. "How do you know?" he asked. "Oh, she got a telegram." "Where is it?" "We haven't opened it yet."
