He did obtain temporary relief, but nothing more. Last January be called on Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who said, after an examination: "Mr. Lawler, you have stone in the bladder. We will first try Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY before risking an operation." A few-days later the following letter passed through the Rondout post-office:

Dr. Kennedy has the stones at his office, and they are sufficiently formidable to justify the claim that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the leading specific for stone in the bladder. In his letter Mr. Lawler mentions that FAVORITE REMEDY also cured him of rheumatism. The subjoined certificate tells its own story:

Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" (of Rondout, N. Y.)—It is not a mere soother, temporarily, of pain, but by its alterative action purifies the blood, restores a healthful condition to the diseased organs, and even dissolves and causes the expulsion of gravel and stone from the kidneys and bladder. The testimony of hundreds who have been cured by it vouches for this.

DEATH WITHOUT PAIN.

nine, perhaps, or corrosive sublimate, or white arsenic, or prussic acid; take it to a doctor, and perhaps he may tell you the same, or he may tell you to give chloroform first, and drown or otherwise kill the animal while under its influence.

BARBAROUS AND CRUEL METHODS.

Not one of these methods can we indorse. and we speak from experience, laving witnessed the death of many animals under each of these methods, even when applied in the most skillful manner. Drowning is a barbarous and cruel method. The head must be forcibly submerged in water; and who that has seen the struggles and heard the cries of a half-drowned animal, should it for a moment get one breath of air, can say that its death was unattended with great and violent pain. Can any one who has witnessed the convulsive struggles the sudden drawing up of the lower limbs toward the throat, the stifled cry, the bursting eyeballs of an animal when killed by hanging, say its death was a painless one? As for the strong-poison treatment, in our opinion it is worse than the two just mentioned, for not only is the suffering most acute, but it is enormously prolonged. Many a poor thing have I seen subjected to what was called skillful treatment in this way, and seldom have I experienced more sickening feelings than when watching the agonies of the dying creature. Many a stout and stern heart have I known on such occasions to resolve that they would not look upon such sights again. No; the death by strong poisons is very, very far from being a humane method. Shooting is too slow and uncertain, and ought to be had recourse to only under exceptional circumstances, when no other methods are applicable. There is one other method, seldom recommended because it is somewhat difficult of application, but which is nevertheless largely employed, and deserves more general recognition. It is the one suggested by Dr. Richardson, and used every week for the destruction of cart-loads of wandering and worthless dogs which find their way to the Home for Lost Dogs at Battersen, and consists in killing chiefly by means of the gas known to chemists as carbonic oxide. Under the influence of this gas the animal sinks into an insensible sleep, from which it never wakes, and without the least sign of pain. It is the form of death so frequently chosen by French suicides, and unwarily has found many a victim in the weary wayfarer who has laid himself to sleep on the warm bank on the leeward side of a burning limekiln. PAINLESS EFFECTS OF CARBONIC OXIDE. Its application does not necessitate so much additional trouble and skill as to make it impracticable or unpopular. The animal has only to be placed in an air-tight charaber connected by a pipe with another cham-ber in which a charcoal fire is lighted. The products of combustion pass along the pipe to the chamber in which the animai is confined, and before long it dies, to all external appearances, a painless death. The quantity of corbonic oxide gas necessary for the struction of an animal is very small. Le Blanc found that animals could live in an atmosphere containing 25 per cent. of carbonic acid, but died in one containing 134 per cent of carbonic oxide, and that recovery was more difficult in the latter case. quantity of this gas is sufficient to cause death. It is therefore evident that but a very small

Dr. Richardson points out that the method can be applied to animals which are killed to supply us with food; that the flesh of animals so killed is in no way altered, and that the blood can be drawn as completely after as before the animal has been narcotized. It has not yet been applied to oxen and horses, the necessarily larger size of the lethal chamber being in itself a difficulty. Moreover, large animals require a higher percentage of gas ta produce in them nar-

The physiological effect of carbonic oxide has long been supposed by chemists to de-pend on the formation of a compound of carbonic oxide with the haemoglobin or matter in the red corpuscles of the blood, by which the latter is prevented from exercising its function as an absorbent of oxygen. But whatever its action may be, one thing is certain, that it is a really humane method of slaughtering animals, and on this account we hope its application will receive that attention it so richly deserves.-Chemist in Chambers' Journal.

The Harpoener's Story.

New Bedford, June 1, 1883.

Dr. J.C. Aten & Co.—Twenty yours ago I was a harpoener in the North Facific, when five others of the crew and myself were laid up with scurvy. Our bodies were bloated, gums awoilen and bleeding, teeth loose, purple blotches all over us, and our breath seemed rotten. Take it by and large we were pretty badly off. All our lime-juice was accidentally destroyed, but the captain had a couple dozen bottles of Aten's Sansaparilla and gave us that. We recovered on it quicker than I have ever seet men brought about by any other treatment for Scurvy, and I've seen a good deal of it. Seeing no mention in your Almanac of your Sarsaparilla being good for scurvy, I thought you ought to know of this, and so send you the facts.

Respectfully yours, Ralph Y. Wingats.

Da. J. C. Ater & Co.—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure to testify to the great value of your Barseparilla. We have been stationed here for over two years, during which time we had to live in tents. Being under canvas for such a time brought on what is called in this country "veldt-sorea," I had those sores for some time. I was advised to take your Barsaparilla, two bottles of which made my sores disappear rapidly, and I am now quite well.

A Case of Rotation of Crops.

The agricultural exlitor, ordinarily alert, has missed an item in a Georgia newspaper, having an important bearing on the subject of rotation of crops. The newspaper referred to says: "On the acre of ground where Tom Betts was hanged, in Clayton county, Mr. J. D. Graves has made fifty-two bushels of corn, 750 bundles of fodder, and 2,574 pounds of pumpkins." Evidently corn should follow hemp. —Chicago Tribune.
