-We furnished the financial statement of this county in our last issue. The report gives a healthy showing for the tax-payer. The debt of the county has again been reduced by the Commissioners in the last fiscal year, and if all outstanding sums are collected it will place a surplus in the county treasury The Commissioners have been faithful to their trust, and deserve the thanks of the people for their economical administration of the affairs of the county. The report should be read by all. The statement is somewhat prolix and could be materially condensed and yet present the same showing satisfactorily.

Centre Hall has lost one of its old residenters in the death of Jacob Arney, Mr. Arney had been in feeble health all winter, and was slowly on the decline until Friday, when he died. Mr. Arney was a good citizen always; he was retired in his habits, and altho' living but two squares from the main part of our village he was rarely seen here unless when on actual business. He was a consistent member of the Reformed church. His funeral took place on last Tuesday, and was largely attended by relatives and some folks take in the town, we note: The railroad company would have made this a water station but one or two busybodies were unselfish enough to assure them that Centre Hall was the dryest spot in this section. When we think that our town supplies all the country around with water in dry seasons, this was a meritorious act. The fellow should be looked after with a microscope and elected to the town council for life.

-The purchase of the Centre Hall water works by the boro' is just now being agitated by some. As the matter of water works is one upon which we plead the ignoramous act, we express no opinion, but leave it entirely to the wise heads of our splendid little town to give light upon so damp a subject. Our town is noted for the best water and most p-rfect and cheap system of any town similarly situated anywhere.

PENNS VALLEY.

THE FIRST SETTLER.

The first emigrant to Centre county was Andrew Boggs. His settlement was upon the Joseph Poultney warrantee. Poultney, in his application, No. 29, Apr. 3, 1769, describes the land he (1769) applies for as on the north side of Bald Eagle Creek, near the fording, including his improvement, marked on a white oak "J. P." Poultney's improvement amounted to nothing more than marking bis claim, and he sold his right to Matthias Slough, a land speculator of Lancaster.

Potter lived first on the north side joining Barber's, and sold 100 acres of it to George Woods. Woods held a piece in his own right, and I purchased it of him. Woods' house was about thirty perches from the land I bought. Then came a piece of land I don't know who owned (Mr. Kerr here testifies that this tract was the Alexander Long, and still in Gen. Potter's family), then my land I bought of Haines (the Great Spring

"I was accquainted up and down the valley, and knew no place called 'the Forks' but this; one road went up and down the valley and one to McGrew's mills. Barber settled on the land after we returned from the war. McGrew's mill was begno the year I came to the valley. A path came over at Long's Gap; cannot say whether there was a path into the head of Brush valley or not. There was a path around the head of Nittany Mountain, and one went to Junkin's cabin and over to Stone valley. There was a path from where I lived across Georges valley to Kishacoquillas. McGrew brought his family in, I think, in 1773. Woods' cabin was on the north side of Sinking Creek, 15 or 17 perches from the J. J. ARNEY.

The other fork from my place went to Buffalo valley. There was another fork in the plains, one branch of which led to Standing Stone, ten or twelve miles from the forks which led to McGrew's mills. The forks to Standing Stone were above the Great Plains. Don't remember of any fork leading to Brush valley. I knew Mr. Maclay and Potter; at great variance before the war, not much after. The plains came nigh to Sinking Creek."

At May session of Northumberland county, Potter township was erected out of Penus, Buffalo and Baid Eagle, bounded eastward by a north-west line from the top of Jack's Mountain, in the Narrows, to the top of Nittany Mountain; thence along the top to end thereof at Wm.
