AN EARLY SETTLER.

Among the early settlers of the eastern section of this valley, were Andrew grand-fathers of the numerous families of that name in Haines and Penn, settled on the south side of the valley in abundance of water, Pine creek and the mountain springs in that quarter, and some of their descendants (the Stovers) still occupy the farms cleared by their grand-parents in Haines township.

Andrew Harter, grand-father of the present generation of Harters, chose a more central portion of the valley, and dec'd, one mile south of Aaronsburg. that section was a wilderness, and howling with wolves, and other wild animals, and a sprinkling with Indians who made kept them in constant dread.

Mr. Harter's first work, with the aid of his wife, was to build a log hut. He brought with him a hired boy. Arriving on his tract in the morning with a span of horses, these were tied to a tree and felling of trees began, and at night the family had a log hut up and ready to give them shelter. The door was an opening with a blanket hung before it to keep out the storm. For windows there were opening left in the sides and oiled paper stretched over these to give light. This hut was thus occupied by the family twelve years; sleeping amid the nocturnal howling of the wolves that prowled around the hut, attracted, no doubt, by the smell of provisions. When enough land had been cleared to raise a small crop, the surplus grain was hauled to Reading-not to Deerstown or Coburn. There were no roads like now, and Mr. Harter had to scuff trees to serve as a guide against missing his way.

Think of that, you Harters, Weavers, and others of to-day, for your grand-fathers went through the same ordeal and teamed to Reading with Andrew Harter!

Mr. Harter often set out alone with his team bound for Reading, leaving the old lady to take care of the home and tremble when the wolves started their concert around the hut at night. These old settlers in their trip to Reading would take with them their cooking utensils and keep their own tavern as they went on their weary trip to Reading. When night came on the halt was in the woods, their bed on the wagon. A trip like this would take 6 to days; and with the return were brought such goods and necessaries as their wants called for.

There are many interesting incidents connected with the early settlers of this valley that will be interesting to relate when Aaronsburg holds its Centennial, next summer. Many of the present generation of Harters, Stovers, Wolfs, Weavers, &c. can recall incidents like the above, which they have from the lips of their grandfathers and grandmas.

On January 4 Mrs. Steadman, postmistress at Mifflinburg, sent a registered letter directed to Harrisburg, containing $254. Last week, thinking she had received but mislaid the receipt for the money, she wrote asking that a duplicate be sent her. Upon investigation it was found that she had no credit for that amount on the books of the Harrisburg office. Postoffice Inspector Ables, of Philadelphia, was sent to make an investigation, and found that the letter had been sent into the post office at Lewisburg, and that while there Catherman, who was recently convicted of robbing a registered pouch at Lewisburg, now in the Sunbury jail, had taken a letter, rifled its contents and spent a large portion of the money in purchasing a watch, bracelet, and other articles of like chaiacter to adorn his lady love. Catherman, on being accused of this, confessed it .-Harrisburg Telegraph.

MURDER OF TWO WOMEN. Pittsburg, March 9 .- A horrible double murder and robbery were committed vesterday at the farm house of John T. Everhart, near Lickingville. A boy in the family, returning home from school, found Mrs. Everhart lying on the floor with her throat cut from ear to ear, and her mother, Mrs. Gilfallan, in the spring use, also with her throat cut and life extinct. New Haven, March 2 .- Mrs. Allie Ellis, otherwise known as the "California Duchess," the confidence woman, who last week attracted attention in Washington, has been shown to be identical with Mrs. M. B. C. Willis, who, fn 1881, victimized a number of Yale students and New Haven business men. She appeared as a fashionable attired blonde of 28 years, and engaged an expensive room at the Tontine, where she soon formed the acquaintance of wealthy students. She became the idol of the fast set, and accepted their drives, suppers and other attentions.

After exhausting the supply of money and valuable presents that were readily forthcoming, she successfully blackmail ed her admirers in considerable amounts by threatening to inform the faculty and their parents of their escapades. Her victims were mostly of the junior and senior classes. After impoverishing the stu-Harter and the Stovers.
