The new metal gallium melts at 81.1 Fahrenheit, so that it liquifies when held in the hand. It is hard and resistant. It can be cut, and it possesses a slight malleability. When fused it forms a beautiful mirror, whiter than that produced by mercury. It oxidizes but very superficially when heated to redness in the air, and does not become volatile. Unlike lead it acquires only a very slight tarnish on exposure to moist air, and is a highly crystalline metal. Its specific gravity is a little under 6. In its chemical characteristics the rare element gallum shows the greatest analogy to the abundant element aluminum.

Dr. Manassein, of St. Petersburg, has given an account of the employment of cocaine in seasickness. Last summer on a sea voyage he had two fellow-passengers, a man and a woman, wo were especially prone to this malady. He administered to each of them every two or three hours a teaspoonful of the following solution : Muriate of co-caine, 0.15; rectified spirits of wine, in sufficient quantity and distilled water, 150.0, beginning with the administration on starting. That it had a prophylactic effect, says the Lancet, seemed clear, for in spite of very rough weather for a period of forty-eight hours both the individuals were, for the first time in their lives, free from seasickness, and enjoyed a very good appetite the whole time. Other instances of its efficacy are related.

FACETLÆ.

"I SAID a very pleasant thing of you to-day," remarked a husband to his wife.

"Did you? what was it?" "A party of us were talking about women and I said that my wife, like Cæsar's, is beyond suspicion."

"Well, the next time you have anything to say about women with your friends you will make a less fool of yourself if you leave me out of the conversation altogether. Cæsar's wife was above suspicion, not beyond it,"

LITTLE Dick was very cross and unhappy, and when his mamma asked him if he wouldn't like to sit in her lap while she told him a nice, long story, he impatiently allowed that he wouldn't.

"A real nice story about a pony, and a cart, and a little boy?" she asked insinuatingly.

No, he didn't want to hear any nice, long story.

"Well, young man," she then said, losing her patience. "if you don't behave yourself a little better you will have to."

"I'm not very familiar with American money." said a Montreal banker, but this bill doesn't look right."

"I guess it's genuine," the depositor remarked. "If it isn't I know where I got it."

"It may be all right, but I am not sure. "Here, John," he said, turning to the messenger boy, "run into some hotel or liquor saloon with this bill, and ask'an Americanicashier if its genuine."

"I UNDERSTAND there is a great deal of rivalry among the ladies at Long Branch this season," he said.

"Yes?" queried his wife, "in what way, dress?"

Yes, undress. They are all trying to outstrip each other.
