very incarnation of war. On the second day he was at Cemetery heights during the frightful cannonade when the rebels con-TA E LOADED BY 10 A. M. centrated the fire of 150 guns on our lines. The air was full of missiles -streams of shot and shell screamed and hissed everywhere; it seemed as though nothing could live under that terrible fire-men and horses were BE FE B torn limb from limb; caissons exploded one after another in rapid succession, blowing TSUM the gunners to pieces. The infantry hugged the ground closely, and sought every slight shelter that the light earthworks afforded. It was literally a storm of shot and shell, like the fall of rain-drops or the beat of hailstones. Those who had taken part in every battle of the war never had seen anything like that cannonade, and the oldest soldiers began to be uneasy for the result. Hundreds and thousands were stricken down; the shricks of animals and screams of wounded men were apalling, still the awful rushing and sound of flying missiles went on and apparently never would cense. It was then, when the firmest hearts had begun to quail, that the army witnessed one of the grandest sights ever beheld by any army on earth. Suddenly a band began to 10 75 play "The Star Sgangled Banner," and Gen. Hancock, with his staff-Col. Mitchell, Capt Bingham, Capt. Parker, Capt. Bronsonwith a corps flag flying in the hands of Private Wells, appeared on the right of his line uncovered and rode down the front of his men to the left. The soldiess held their breath, expecting every moment to see him fall from his horse pierced by a dozen bullets, but still he rode on, while the shot roared and crashed around him, every' moment tearing great gaps in the ranks by his side. "BOLDLY THEY RODE AND WELL," Every soldier felt his heart thrill as he witnessed the magnificent courage of his general, and he resolved to do something that day which would equal it in daring. Just as Hancock reached the left of his line minnenta. the rebel battery ceased to play, an their infantry, 18,000 strong, were also emerging from the woods and advancing up to shill Hancock know the artillery freen 1 Loon intended to demoralize bis men an a cover the
