THE INTER STATE COMMERCE BILL

Beck Thinks the Bill Should Pass and Stanford Thinks It Should Not. WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.-The interstate commerce bill came up for discussion and Senator Beck took the floor. Mr. Beck went on to say that the report presented the issue fairly between those who wished that the interstate railways be operated subject to law and those who desired the railroads to make their own laws; that the present measure was the result of ten years' consideration on the part of committees of the two houses, and that the defeat of this measure would keep the control of the commerce of the country in the hands of the railroads, Mr. Beck quoted from decisions of the courts showing that it was the right and duty of congress to legislate on this subject. He read from a book on the "Railroads of the Republic," which stated that the Standard Oil company received from the various railroads during eighteen months rebates amounting to $10,-000,000, and by reason of these rebates crushed out all competition in the oil trade. He recommended this chapter to the various commercial bodies that were sending in petitions against the interstate commerce bill. He believed that if these facts were laid before any commercial body in America it would vote against the continuance of such outrages. He was not an enemy of the railroads; he only wanted them forced to show equal justice to all; he would vote for the bill because it would interfere with no legitimate rights of the railroads and would bring about the result desired.

of scrutiny to which it had been subjected by the press and railroad companies. The feature most objected to was the long and short haul clause, and that was because it was either misunderstood or misrepresented. Is was possible he thought that any congressional action might, in some respects, prove ineffective, unless supplemented by state legislation, just as state legislation had been found incomplete in the absence of national legislation. He believed the measure when fairly tested would prove beneficial both to the railroads and the public.

Referring to the objections urged against the short haul section that it is indefinite and ambiguous, the senator argued that but one construction can be reasonably placed upon this section, especially when considered, as it must be, in connection with the other provisions of the bill. Mr. Cullum explained the different sections of the bill.

Senator Stanford opposed the bill. It provided, he said, for a regulation of one species of property which was not extended to other

His argument was directed mainly against the section prohibiting railroads from charging less for the greater than the shorter haul. He maintained that the shorter distance was not charged any more because of the less rate for the longer distance and that the longer distance business helps to maintain the roads, and without that help perhaps they could not do the shorter business at all. The bill seemed not only to deny competion by railroads, but to exhibit a tendency to foster water ways to the positive discouragement of railroad interests,

"If," said the senator, "railroading is a legitimate business, and if it is only the aggregate of the private property con-tributed by the stockholders; if it is main-PERFUMERY, FANCY GOODS, &c tained and operated by the labor of indiRure Wines and Liquors for medics yiduals, what justification can there be for manufacturer, for storage. The fire originaoriginal investment, I am unable to see, come a law, its consequences will be most disastrons, in my judgment, to the various business interests of the country. While the railroad companies have practically been as free to manage their business under the common law, as those engaged in other callings, the country has prospered. Accommodations have been given, and are given, that promote the prosperity of long industry. There has been no taking of property without compensation, no control without ownership, and the Anarchists in the history of the country have thus far found little justification in the example of the government for violent taking of property."

In conclusion Senator Stanford said there could be no valid objection to police regulations, but only to that attempted regulations which affects values directly and inevitably.

Miscellaneous Notes.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 .- The Star says that new moves are being made in the game of revenue reduction. Messrs. Randall and Hiscock, with their respective followings, started out to circumvent Mr. Merrison's mountain water, surrounded by finest tariff plans. The Republicans who are opnatural scenery in the state. Schools posed to the abolition of the internal revenue and churches convenient. Terms very are now planning to checkmate Mr. Randall by voting to consider the ways and means tariff bill if the house goes into committee of tne whole on revenue matters. Representative Anderson, of Kansas, said that if Mr. Randall attempted to carry out his revenue plans there would be enough Republicans who would rote against his motion to lay aside the Morrison bill to defeat it, and if Mr. Morrison's friends stood by him the bill reported favorably by the ways and means committee would be taken up. If this opposition appears too strong Mr. Randall may hange his plans.

The regulations promulgated by the president governing promotions in the New York custom house provide that the board of examiners may at any time, with the approval of the civil corvice commission, order an ar-amination for promotion, five days notice being posted in the office for which such ex-amination is to be held. Promotions shall be from class to class, and the examination of persons in one class shall be to test their fitness for promotion to the next higher class All persons in the class immediately below the class to which promotions are to be made and who have been in said class for at least six months, must be examined for promotion. In grading the competitors due weight must be given to the efficiency with which the competitors shall have performed their duties in the office, but none who shall have falled to attain a minimum standard of 75 per cent. in the written examination shall be certified for promotion. The whole list of eligibles from whom the promotion is to be made shall be certified to the nominating

The supreme court of the United States has rendered a decision in the case of King of the Belgians et al. versus Mali, counsel. The question involved related to jurisdiction of the courts of New Jersey, and is of international importance. A murder was re-cently committed on a Belgian vessel lying at a New Jersey wharf. The culprit was arrested and lodged in a New Jersey jail. The King of Belgian demanded custody of the prisoner on the ground that the crime was committed on Belgian property, and not on the soil of the United States. THE UNION PACIFIC.

President Adams Says No Money Has Been Used Illegally. Boston, Jan. 11 .- President Adams, of the Union Pacific Railroad company, has written Senator Hoar and Congressman Crisp, who have the Pacific railroad funding bill in charge, denying in most positive terms that the Union Pacific has "spent, or ventured in any illegitimate way, a dollar" to promote such legislation. He also says that he has reason to know that the Central Pacific is indifferent to the measure, if not actually opposed to it. He asserts that he has evidence that the story of bribery was started by blackmailers and stock jobbers for their own pecuniary benefit at the expense of the permanent interests of the Union Pacific road and of the government. Mr. Adams further says that the Union Pacific has no preference as between the two measures pending, in the house and in the senate. The provisions of both are too hostile, and either would dangerously overload the future resources of the company. But the company is prepared to accept either and try to live up to its requirements, if by so doing it can once for all end the continual warfare upon it of those who seek to pronomote their own stock gambling interests by false statements and insinuations.

> He Wants Picked Men. Suzz, Jan. 11.-Dr. Junker, the Russian explorer and friend of Emin Pasha, the beleaguered Turkish viceroy of equatorial Africa, has arrived here, and will go immediately to Cairo. He urges the utmost haste in organizing and dispatching the expedition for the relief of Emin Pasha, and points our the necessity that the men composing the expedition should be picked with special reference to the peculiar duty they will be called upon to perform and the hardships they will necessarily undergo, and also insists that they shall be well equipped. Should these requirements not be complied with there is danger that the expedition may result disastrously.

> Blackmailing Liquor Dealers. LOWELL, Mass., Jan. 11.—The leading liquor dealers assert that an organized uttempt is being made by certain parents to make the small dealers support them during the winter. The parents send their children to the shops for beer and then threaten to prosecute the dealers for selling liquor to minors. Some of the proprietors have paid the amount demanded rather than go into court and have their names published. A grocer, who also has a liquor license, complains that he is unable to collect his bills for groceries from several customers, and they threaten to swear out warrants against him for illegally selling liquor if he trustees their

His Wife and Sen in a Cistera. Tiffin, O., Jan. 11.—George Backus, who lives at Green Springs, near this city, left home leaving his wife and child, a boy of 5 years. He did not return until evening. The house was cold and deserted. Looking into the cistern he found his wife and child Musical Instruments, such as, clasped in each others arms and both dead. It is supposed the little boy accidentally fell into the cisiern and the mother in trying to rescue him jumped into the tank and both were frozen to death. The water was but four feet deep.

A Mild Earthquake. CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 11 .- There was a moderate earthquake here last night about 7:55 o'clock.
