

FARM NOTES

BEST FOWLS FOR EARLY MARKET. -Good crosses are perhaps better than the pure stock when raised for market purposes alone, as they seem to grow faster and generally make larger birds, which point, of course, is always desirable to obtain. The breeder should, however, be very careful to dispose of all the half-bred stock at market time, or if they are kept and allowed to grow up on the place there is a considerable liability of their becoming mixed with the pure stock, as they are oftentimes hard to distinguish in looks, but the foreign blood will most surely show itself sooner or later, and generally when it is least expected by the breeder.

To one who has not given the matter much attention it would be surprising to note the difference in the growth of the different breeds during the earlier part of their life. For instance such fowls as the Houdans or any of the laying breeds will grow very fast for the first month or two, and generally mature earlier than the larger breeds do, while on the other hand the larger breeds of the Asiatic classes are very slow in their growth for the first month at least, but after that time they seem to take a jump and then continue to grow remarkably fast until they are fully matured. These large breeds are undoubtedly the best for market purposes when they are kept all the season and sold during the fall and winter, but my experience has been that they are not the most profitable to raise for the earliest markets.

A cross between the two breeds will be much better for early market, and will partake some of the nature of both breeds.

PARIS GREEN FOR THE CURCULIO. -We have seen no notice of any experiments this year in the use of Paris green for the curculio, and therefore give the results of trials made on our grounds for protecting the Bartlett pear from the codling moth. The crops in past years have been much injured and rendered knotty and distorted by the curculio, and a small portion have been found to contain the codling moth. This year we had them sprayed three times, when the fruit was quite small, with Paris green in water, at the usual strength used on young apples. Several trees at a distance were left unsprayed. The fruit growing on the sprayed trees was remarkable for its smooth appearance; that on the others was injured and distorted as usual. One experiment like this is not sufficient to establish a conclusion, and we invite the reports of others who have made similar trials, if any have done so. If this remedy will exclude these insects from the plum, it will be much easier of application than jarring. The way in which this poison operates on them may not be fully understood. The coating of poison is necessarily extremely thin; one part in seven hundred times as much water, and only two or three drops of water on a single specimen, would give a film of the Paris green less than a hundred thousandth part of an inch in thickness, and reasoning theoretically, this would not be likely to deter the insects from puncturing the skin and depositing their eggs. But being carried into the flesh of the young fruit on the point of the ovipositor, it may be enough to kill the minute young larvae as soon as hatched. The subject is worthy of further investigation.

It is found in practice that beans are not a good crop to precede wheat. One reason possibly is that they leave the soil in too loose a condition or the roots will not hold in water. But the chief objection to beans as a fallow crop is that they rob the soil of precisely the food that the wheat plant requires, phosphate and nitrogen. Farmers who grow beans this summer should save their land for spring grain, which will give opportunity for more plant food to accumulate before wheat roots are started in search of it.

A FIRSTED comb would not be very objectionable to those who only breed fowls for front and not for exhibition, but when the combs become frostier the hen ceases to lay until the injured member is completely healed. As the comb may be frozen several times during the cold season the loss of time from egg production, owing to the effect of the temperature, would be quite an important item. The double comb varieties, though exposing quite a large surface to the action of cold, have their combs closer to the head.

The small streams which often flow through farms are almost invaluable sources of fertility, if the mud which accumulates in them every year is cleaned out and spread upon the land. All the leaves, together with the fine mold from cultivated fields, find a lodgment in the beds of these streams. Several loads of manure as valuable as that made in stables may thus be secured every year.

A SOLUTION of India rubber in benzine has been used for years as a coating for steel, iron, and lead, has been found a simple means of keeping them from oxidizing. It can be easily applied with a brush, and is as easily rubbed off. It should be made about the consistency of cream.

Here is a new English remedy for crab biting. Nail a strip of sheep skin, about eight inches in width, the entire length of the crib; select a skin covered with Cayenne pepper. Renew it occasionally, and the worst cribber can be persuaded to desist from his habit.

Nothing is better or cheaper, says the Massachusetts Ploverman, than good fruit raised on one's own place. The true way to do, to begin with, is to get ready to plant our fruit trees before the spring slips by. Once having got a good start in growing small fruit for family consumption, the abundant supply becomes an easy matter.

CASTOR oil is said to be an excellent lubricant for all kinds of farm implements. A good wagon-grease may be made of equal parts of tallow, castor oil, crude petroleum and kerosene.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

This successful medicine is a carefully prepared extract of the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science as Alteratives, Blood Purifiers, Diuretics, and Tonics, such as Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock, Stillingia, Dandelion, Juniper Berries, Mandrake, Wild Cherry Bark and other selected roots, herbs and barks. A medicine like anything else, can be fairly judged only by its results. We point with satisfaction to the glorious record Hood's Sarsaparilla has entered for itself upon the hearts of thousands of people who have personally or indirectly been relieved of terrible suffering which all other remedies failed to reach. Sold by all druggists. $1.50 per bottle. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

"Impossible, madam! Can I see it?"

"Well, I dunno. He's out in the back yard now and he's apt to get mad if strangers look at him."

GEORGE had proposed and been accepted.

"Well," she said, "I can sing and play on the piano and harp, can paint, and at the seminary I was up in the fine arts and political economy and logic, and I can crochet beautifully and play lawn tennis, and—and that's about all, I think. Now tell me: what are some of your accomplishments, George?"

"I haven't got any."

"Not a single one?"

"Well," he said, with a sigh, "if the worst should come to the worst, I think I might be able to cook."

FASTING.—Two sisters were entertaining their friends the other night when one remarked, speaking of a gentleman who lived in the house, and who was present at the time: "Yes, Mr. Fitzhugh is just too kind. Lots, you know, is always preparing some new dish, and as the rest of us have had experience we are a little shy about tasting them for the first time, but Mr. Fitzhugh always comes heroically to the rescue and acts the food censor to perfection."

"Yes," said the big brother, trying to be agreeable, "that he does. The girls remind me of Hobson Crusoe. You know whenever he found anything he was not quite sure of its being poison or not he always first tried it on a monkey."

A VERY tall, dignified, stately, austere gentleman from the East has been out lately looking at California. He was much impressed with our glorious climate, our very large country, and great development in agriculture, horticulture and viticulture, but he is more impressed now with our wonderful small boy culture. He was on the train, and one of those assiduous newsboys came frequently, pressing him to buy the promising specimens of our journal culture. He refused, and finally the small boy, on the last rebuff, gazed on him for a moment and said blandly: "I've got some picture papers for them as can't read."

AN UNFEELING REMARK.—Mrs. Yegger—"I believe I will accompany our daughter, Clara to the ball this evening."

Col. Yegger—What is your object?"

"When the people see how beautiful she is they will say: 'How lovely her mother must have looked when she was young.'"

"No, that's not what they will say."

"What will they say?"

"When they see you at the ball with Clara they will say 'See how ugly Clara will be when she gets to be as old as her mother.'"

"Oh, you brute!"

A THOUGHTFUL PA.—Count Fortunchunter—Now that we are married, never more to part, I want to ask you if it was not a great struggle for you to give up your luxurious home and become the wife of a—a comparatively poor man, you know.

Bride—Oh, I went through that struggle long before I met you. Pa advised me to marry.

"What?"

"The place is mortgaged for twice its value, and Pa had to borrow money to hold on to it until after the wedding. Pa always was so thoughtful."

A WISE PRECAUTION.—De Graff (softly to wife)—"What a homely girl you are promanaging with, Monsieur Sully."

Sully—"Sh-h-h. My father told me to shun beautiful sirens, and I have selected the ugliest one I could find."
