A BANDIT'S NERVE.
An Hour with Vasquez on the Night Before His Execution.
A writer in the San Francisco Examiner recalls the hanging, in 1874, of Tiburcio Vasquez, a Mexican brigand who had robbed and slaughtered with his band of cut-throats scores of settlers and travelers.
Sheriff Adams, afterward murdered in Arizona by friends of the bandit, so it is supposed, let a party of San Francisco reporters into the San Jose jail the night before the execution.
As Vasquez stood there, one hand on the arm of his chair, the newspaper in the other, and showing a courteous interest in the efforts of the bustling deputy to find seats for his guests, he was far from formidable in appearance. However terrible he may have looked when, shotgun in hand, he rode up to the stage coach, or the wretched store, the lonely traveler or the isolated ranch house, with his clattering, criminal cavalry behind him, as ready to blow out brains and cut throats as to take the order, he was now but a short, broad-shouldered, dark-skinned, pleasant-faced Mexican, with nothing whatever forbidding about him. Indeed, his manner was engaging.
The fellow was a gentleman. He showed it not only in his politeness, but in the cool composure with which he faced his dreadful foe.
"I would rather talk of something else, if it is agreeable to you, gentlemen," he said, when the reporters fell to business, and questioned him about the state of his mind.
"I am to be hanged to-morrow. Very well, I don't like it, but I have no choice. See?"
And he shrugged his shoulders and smiled.
"Do you feel that you deserve your fate?" solemnly asked the dullest reporter.
"Well, that does not much matter," he answered, lighting a cigar. "While I never killed anybody myself, I permitted my men to do so, and in the eyes of the law that is the same thing; so I suppose I deserve what is going to happen. Since I can not help myself I am content."
His English was not nearly as good as this, but it was not bad as an attempt to render his Mexican accent in print would make it.
"Do you believe in a hereafter?" asked the solemn reporter.
"Um—do you?" he asked in return, his black eyes twinkling.
The solemn reporter grinned, and so did Vasquez.
"The priest has been here. He says there is another world. He is a good man and believes it. Very well, I do not know. But," seriously, "I die a Christian, as I have lived. Will you pardon me, gentlemen, if I ask you to talk about something else than myself. I am glad to see you; I like company. The weather is pleasant, eh?"
Soon he leaned back in his rude chair with an animated countenance, ready to chat, like one who wished to while away the dragging hours. He had about fourteen of them left.
The man's face was strong and firm. He was in the prime of life, and in perfect health. His courage had been proved in many a bloody fight, and it was by murdering all his visitors it would have given him one chance in a thousand of escape, that chance would have been taken, and God thanked for it. As it was, he smiled cordially, and accepted the inevitable with manly composure.
His politeness was inexhaustible. The tow-headed editor of one of the local papers came in, greeted him with a hospitable hilarity meant at once to cheer the condemned and display to the metropolitan journalists his superior intemperance with a celebrated character. The editor actually took a copy of his paper from his pocket and, with the remark, "I suppose you want to hear what I said about you tonight," sat down and read to Vasquez three solid columns about his crimes, the preparations for the hanging, and a minute description of the gallows, with mention of the other criminals who had stepped upon it.
This performance appalled the callous reporters, but Vasquez bore it in silence, without a wince or a frown.
Sheriff Adams appeared, and the Mexican retired into the shadow with him. They whispered together, and the sheriff seemed to be trying to dissuade his charge from some purpose. But Vasquez was resolute, and the officer retired with a deprecatory showing of his palms.
About there was a tramping of feet without, the key turned, and the iron doors were thrown open, clanging. Two men bearing a coffin, and followed by a black-coated undertaker with a pair of trestles in his hand, came in. The coffin—a fine one, studded with silver-headed nails—was placed on the trestles, and the brigand, cigar in teeth, stepped up and inspected it with a lively interest. He half squatted, and ran his hand along the side.
"It's too short," he said, with surprise, looking at the awed undertaker, who assured him that it was all right—that it should be measured at the top, not near the bottom.
"It's high," cried Vasquez, with a wave of his hand, pleased at the quality of the coffin, which had been provided by his friends. The undertaker thought he referred to the lid, which was rounded, and said that it was the fashion to make them that way.
"Oh, he doesn't mean that," said the local editor, scornfully. "What he means is that it's nifty."
"Yes, nifty," agreed the Mexican, glancing gratefully at the San Jose journalist for supplying the right word. "Yes, yes, it is nifty."
He put his hand inside, felt the padding, pressed the little pillow, and, with an upward tilt of his cigar, observed:
"Well, I shall sleep there very well forever."
He turned away toward his chair.
"Devil take me, Vasquez, if you haven't nerve," exclaimed a reporter, admiringly.
"What would be the use of being the other way?" he said, calmly enough, but there was a sharp thrill in his tone that hinted of the agony in the caged man's heart.
On the morrow he walked out into the sunlit jail-yard, climbed the steps of the scaffold, gazed indifferently at the gaping mob of men below, threw a wistful glance beyond the walls at the blue hills, on which he had ridden on many a fray with his cutthroats, and then gave all his attention to the ghastly business of the moment.
They sought to unbutton his coat and collar. He waved them aside politely and did it himself. He assisted the hangman in adjusting the straps and rope, glanced down to see that his feet were precisely on the crack, kissed the crucifix held out to him by the priest, and bore himself with patience while they drew over him a white shroud and placed on his head and shoulders a great black hood. "I am ready," he said, serenely, closing his eyes. And that was the last of Vasquez.

COLLISION AT SEA.
The Steamer Scholten Run Down in a Dense Fog.
Dover, Nov. 21.—At a late hour Saturday night the steamer W. A. Scholten of the Netherlands American steam navigation company bound from Rotterdam to New York collided with an unknown vessel about four miles south of the Downs and foundered thirty minutes afterwards.
The wind was light from the southwest, accompanied by thick weather, when the collision occurred. There were 165 people on board the Scholten, and only twenty-five of these are known to have been saved. They were rescued by the crews of passing steamers, and landed early yesterday morning at Dover.
According to the stories of the survivors, it is feared that 140 persons were drowned when the Scholten went down. The scenes during and after the collision, as described by the rescued passengers and crew, were heartrending.
Millions Involved.
St. Louis, Nov. 19.—A suit is to be begun in this city in a few days for the possession of a half interest in a tract of land 200 feet wide and a mile and a half long in the heart of the city. Jean Baptiste Bequette, so the complaint says, was an early French settler who purchased this tract when St. Louis was a village and the property was out in the country. When he died he left it to his two daughters. One of them moved away, and the other afterwards sold the property to J. B. C. Lucas, giving him a deed for the whole. It is still in the possession of the heirs and assigns of Mr. Lucas, but now comes the heirs of the sister who moved away, and who claim the undivided half of all this property, which is now valued at $50,000,000.

The Heathen Chinese.
San Francisco, Nov. 21.—The United States against customs inspectors William A. Boyd and Ferdinand D. Ciprico and six other inspectors for illegally aiding and abetting the landing in America of certain Chinese persons. For years the custom house authorities here have been aware that certificates have been fraudulently issued and that a number of general certificates have been stolen from the custom office. The collector said yesterday there is evidence of a long series of frauds, that at least 8,000 or 10,000 certificates have illegally found their way to China and been sold.
Reduced Wages Drive Out 500 Men.
Worcester, Mass., Nov. 21.—Between 500 and 600 men employed at the Worcester steel works are out on strike. The company on Thursday announced a cut down averaging about 10 per cent in the pay of the men employed in the Bessemer steel plant, to take effect on Monday. The workmen grumbled, and Friday the company issued a notice that unless the men accepted the reduction the works would be shut down Thursday night. The men went out Friday night and the works did not run Saturday. The company says the reduction is absolutely necessary, as the mills have been running at a loss lately.

Young Anarchists in a Cave.
Omaha, Neb., Nov. 21.—About a score of young anarchists on Twelfth street, aged from twelve to fourteen years, were in a big cave Saturday denouncing the police, a la anarchist, when a pile of barrels and tumbrels with which they had barricaded the entrance caught fire from a cigar stub. It burned so fiercely that none of them dared approach to shut down, and they were in imminent danger of being immolated at the altar of Anarch when two policemen, hearing their screams, rescued them. The hair and eyebrows of several of the boys were badly singed, but no one was seriously hurt.
Forced to Leave Guatemala.
Guatemala, Nov. 21.—Private advices from this city say that a ship named Royal has gone to the United States, the government of Guatemala having forced him to leave the republic. The charges against him are insubordination, and a tendency to interfere in temporal concerns. The bishop retired with his private fortune of $100,000 intact. The old cabinet of President Barrios has been re-elected.
Shot His Son.
Pittsburg, Nov. 20.—Yesterday evening P. A. Stout, a stucco worker, shot his son Adolph, aged 20 years, through the back, and then attempted suicide. Adolph died almost instantly. The cause of the tragedy was domestic trouble. Stout and his wife frequently quarreled, and the son, it is said, took his mother's part.
Found in a Barn.
Lawrence, Mass., Nov. 21.—Charles Jackman and Michael Wiley, who have been living on a farm on the Haverhill turnpike, are under arrest in Boston on a charge of conducting a illicit distillery in a barn. The still and other fixtures were destroyed by the government officers who made the arrests.

Blown Up by Natural Gas.
Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 20.—A terrible natural-gas explosion occurred at East Toledo last night, caused by tapping the mains for the extension of the lines. Dr. Beckwith's office and Capt. Luckey's block are in flames. One boy was fatally burned and several others seriously injured.

COURT PROCLAMATION.
WHEREAS, the Hon. A. O. Furst, President of the Court of Common Pleas of the 4th Judicial District, consisting of the counties of Centre and Huntingdon, and the Hon. Chester Munson and the Hon. Daniel Rhoads Associate Judges in Centre county, having issued their process, bearing date the 27th day of October, 1887, to me directed, for holding a Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery and Quarter Sessions of the Peace in Bellefonte, for the county of Centre, and to commence on the 4th Monday of Nov. being the 27th day of Nov. 1887, and to continue two weeks. Notice is hereby given to the Coroner, Justices of the Peace, Aldermen and Constables of said county of Centre, that they be then and there in their proper persons, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of the 28th, with their records, inquiries, examinations, and their own remembrances, to do those things which to their office appertain to be done, and those who are bound in recognizances to prosecute against the prisoners that are or shall be in the jail of Centre county, be then and there to prosecute against them as shall be just.
Given under my hand, at Bellefonte, the 27th day of Oct. in the year of our Lord 1887, and the one hundred and twentieth year of the Independence of the United States.
W. MILES WALKER, Sheriff.
