THRESHING OATS BY HAND .-Some good farmers are readopting the old method of threshing their oat crops with a flail, leaving the work to be done in winter, and thus furnishing employment to men who would otherwise be idle. There are some other advantages in this practice not included in the employment it gives to labor in winter. The freshly threshed oat straw is readily eaten by stock, and there are usually enough light oats left | pad large enough to cover the sole of the in it to make it possible good feed. It is better to leave light oats in the straw than to put them in the bin among the threshed grain, for unless the grain is carefully graded some of these light oats will go in the seed and help to deteriorate the crop. With hand threshed oats in cold weather, there has been no danger that vitality of seed has been impaired by heating. While the oat is in the sheaf any dampness in the grain is absorbed by the chaff, and as the head is bulky and porous it dries out without injury. Oats threshed by machine as soon as harvested, and then dumped, several hundred bushels, perhaps, in one bin, and pretty sure to heat. It would be better in such case if the seed were entirely spoiled instead of having its vitality impaired. The crop comes up weak, and if the season is not every way favorable it is a partial failure at the best, and this makes a large proportion of poor oats for seed the subsequent season.

ONE WAY TO MAKE AN EGG TESTER .- A cheap and simple egg tester may be made of a pasteboard box and about half a yard of any light weight, dull black cloth. The box should be seven inches long by six inches wide and deep. Cut a hole in each end of the box, one hole large | Immerse it in some weak acid, such as enough to fit over the largest part of a common lamp chimney and the other The acid eats into or dissolves the lime so that it will just fit over the top. Cut another hole in one side about the shape and a little smaller than the average size of an egg. Line the inside of the box and the cover with the cloth and fasten the cover of the box on tightly, so that no light can reach the inside of the box. Also cover the outside of the box, cutting out three holes in the cloth, drawing the inner and outer linings together around the edges of the holes so that they will not come in contact with the lamp. Light your lamp, put the tester over the chimney, exclude all light from the room and you are ready. Place the eggs against the hole in the side of the tester and you will find that it will work to your complete satisfaction. An Easy Core for Weak, Tired and Care should be taken to get the hole in the side of the tester opposite the flame of the lamp, so as to get the full strength of the light through the egg.

HOUSEHOLD.

HOW TO KEEP THE FEET WARM .-Feet may be kept warm in almost any weather and with any covering. The method known to old lumbermen should be more generally employed, and would probably save many a frozen foot. Take two bunches of common curled hair as large as the closed fist of the person whose feet are to be kept warm. A little liberality in the quantity will do no harm. Pull this out and make a foot from heel to toe. It must be pulled out light and free from lumps and bunches. Put one of these pads in each stocking next the foot, The quantity of hair must depend to some extent on the looseness of the shoe. But whether much or little is used, the object is to cover the sole of the foot only with hair, and prevent the feet from coming in contact with the stocking. The sides and top will then take care of themselves. The writer has successfully used a bunch of hairless than the bulk of the fingers of one hand. So small a quantity is likely to be full of lumps, and does not well protect the foot; yet it prevents the foot from becoming cold enough to ache. If curled hair is not to be had, that which can be combed from the mane and tail of the horse, or cut or pulled from the necks and heads of cattle or other animals will answer. When the shoe or boot is so tight that no space remains for the hair, remove the stocking and place the hair on the bottom of

This may be successfully performed on the first experiment although a few precautions will be found necessary. As the eggs used are usually blown, in order that they may be preserved, the holes should be plugged with wax and made air-tight. As they will be found very light, some method should be devised for holding them under the surface. Two or three minutes will suffice to give the writing the proper relief, but the result will be more satisfactory if the acid is weaker and the time taken longer.

> SCURF ON A BABY'S HEAD, -A dark brown scurf sometimes gathers on a baby's head, giving the child an uncared for and dirty appearance. This may be easily removed by rubbing a little vaseline or sweet oil upon the spot and letting it remain for a few hours; then upon washing it with warm water and soap, the offending dandruff will disappear and the little head be left clean and white as any part of the body. It is important that this should be removed as often as it makes its appearance, for if left the hair is often injured or ceases growing in consequence.

WHY WILLIAM NEVER MENTIONED TOBACCO. -Shakspeare never mentioned tobacco, though it had come into use before he wrote his first composition in the district school. Donnelly thinks this is additional evidence that Bacon wrote the plays. Had he said anything about smoking he was afraid the critics might smoke Bacon, don't you see? But it was Shakspeare's first and only experience with tobacco that sickened him of the subject so that he couldn't bear to hear it mentioned afterward. It was his first clgar. After he had puffed it awhile about the streets of Stratford-on-Avon he became dizzy and thought it was Steatford-on-a-drank. He sat down hours; and when he meekly but prayerfully rose, he resolved never to take the weed in his mouth again. He never did,, and the very name of it ANOTHER MIRACLE SMASHED. -
