FARM NOTES,

ANALYSIS OF SOILS .- Sometwentyfive or thirty years ago a few of the most prominent contributors to the agricultural press were urging the great importance of an analysis of the soil of every farm, in order that the owner might determine for what kind of crops it was best adapted, also if it contained too much of any one substance or too little of another to insure the greatest fertility. The author of 'Elements of Agriculture," 1854, declared: "The farmer cannot be too strongly advised to procure an analysis." The "obvious reasons," however, consisted mainly in paying a certain clique of self-assumed chemists $5 to $10 for a half-way analysis of a few ounces of soil. Hundreads of farmers believed there was something in the theoretical agriculture, and paid their hard earned cash only to find out that the analysis of a few ounces of soil taken from one place on their farm was of really no practical use in determining the fertility or barrenness of that which had not been analyzed. If the soil of the entire farm to the depth of one or two feet could be thoroughly intermingled and then a ton or more of this analyzed, we might make a very close guess as to the amount of valuable constituents an acre contained, or was needed to make the soil fertile, or adapted to the growth of certain kinds of plants. But as the chemist only proposed to analyze a few ounces of soil, his work would be of little value to the practical farmer.

SEEDLESS RAISINS .- "What is a 'seedless' raisin and how is it produced?" was asked of an importer of fruits, "The next time you eat a piece of mince pie," he replied, "you will find the seedless raisin in it, if the 'meat' has been properly made. It is a smallish, cream colored fruit; about the size of a gooseberry, and is used with an unbroken skin. It comes from Smyrma, and is called the 'Sultana.' It is grown seedless, simply by arresting This to a great degree may be attribuone of the laws of nature. When the ted to the almost universal ignorance grape is about half ripe the end of the vine is bent and buried in the ground. This prevents the formation of seed and the full development of the fruit, but it ripens all the same, and has a delictous flavor,

THE treatment which colts receive has a telling effect upon them when they are grown up, says an expert horseman. Injuries and blemishes are like the leaves on trees; they increase in size as the body increases. It is an undisputed fact that the condition of the feet of a horse is more or less affected by the condition of the ground on which the feet are treated in any kind of soil. If they are kept confined to stables and compelled to stand crop will continue to afford green continually upon hard plank floors, the feet will be more or less injured by it; or if they are constantly kept on soft, loamy ground the feet will be soft and spongy, and in about as bad condition as if bruised up by being a stabled continually.

A SUBSCRIBER asks for a positive cure for scab in sheep. It is doubtful if a sure remedy be known, as the disease is contagious, and once it makes Their names and their number nobody its appearance it seems to remain. The ordinary commercial sheep washes are the most effectual, but the sheep must be frequently dipped, which entails labor. When scab appears it would be cheaper to destroy some flocks entirely than to attempt to cure.

CALIFORNIA stage proprietors are said to soak all the wood work of wagons and vehicles in oil before putting the parts together. The oil used is crude petroleum. If the wood-work outside, using a brush, once in eight weeks is excellent. The method is said to prevent the wood from swelling or shrinking, and saves much valuable time as their is less repairing.

FALL pigs are claimed to entail less labor than spring pigs, as they can be fed and cared for in the winter. This is true to a certain extent, but much depends upon the age of the pig on the approaching of cold weather. If expected to pass through the winter they should be from early litters, or they will be stunted in growth should the season be severe. September-farrowed the second year.

THE cow that gives a fabulous yield of milk with but little butter and cheese in it, says John Gould, consuming large rations, is a white elephant beside another cow that with one-third cheese and butter with half the ration.

LARD as a lubricator is said to loosen the spokes if used on wagons. Old pine knot tar is better, and two parts of tallow, one of tar and one of castor oil make a first-rate mixture for cold weather.

In transplanting young seedlings It is important they should not be exposed to drying winds or hot sun, even a few minutes. The soil should be well worked in among the roots and firmed with the feet.

"Consumption can be Cured." DR. J. S. COMBS, Owensville, Ohio, says: "I have given Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites to four patients with better results than seemed possible with any remedy. All were hereditary cases of Lung disease, and advanced to that stage when Coughs, pain in the chest, frequent breathing, frequent pulse, fever and Emaciation. All these cases have in-creased in weight from 16 to 28 lbs., and are not now needing any medicine."

If we rightly estimate what we call good and evil we shall find that it lies much in comparison.

Organic weakness, nervous debility, prenature decline of the manly powers, involuntary losses, impaired memory, mental anxiety, absence of will-power, melancholy, weak back, and all affections arising from youthful indiscretions and pernicious, solitary practices, are speedily, thoroughly and permanently cured.

We, many years ago, established a Special Department for the treatment of these diseases, under the management of some of the most skillful physicians and surgeons on our Staff, in order that all who apply to us might receive all the advantages of a full Council of the most experienced specialists.

We offer no apology for devoting so much attention to this neglected class of diseases, believing that no condition of humanity is too wretched to merit the sympathy and bost services of the noble profession to which we belong. Why any medical man, intent on doing good and allevisting suffering, should shun such cases, we cannot understand; and yet of all the other maladies which afflict mankind there is probably none about which physicians in general practice knew so little. We shall, therefore, continue, as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration, sympathy, and skill, all applicants who are suffering from any of these delicate diseases.
