JOHN MORLEY.

A Rapidly Rising Liberal Leader - His Services as First Lieutenant to Glad-

John Morley is rapidly rising to the proportions of supreme leader on the Liberal horizon. As long as the Grand Old Man lives Mr. Morley will be a lieutenant, although his power and adroitness as a statesman oftentimes lead him into the position of supreme commander. He is a man of varied talents, who at twenty-one had capabilities in almost any direction in life. He was born at Blackburn in 1838, went to Cheltenham, and afterward to Lincoln College, Oxford. Nowhere did he at any time display any great scholarship or prophesy his future greatness. When he left Oxford he plunged at once into London journalism. He had a brilliant, flexible style of writing, which he put to account first on the Literary Gazette. His work soon brought him to a promotion to a desk on the Saturday Review. That was in the time when the Saturday Residence had a monoply of thunder in the literary heavens and it did not take long for Mr.

Morley to assume the proportions of a demigod in the eyes of English authors. In time he succeeded George Lewes in the editorship of the Fortnightly, which, under his handling, became the oracle of the Liberal party in England. Mr. Morley read law with the famous Frederic Harri-

JOHN MORLEY. son, but has never practiced. Besides his career as a statesman, his achievements in literature would make him famous. He has edited much of the Englishmen of Letters series, and written books of world-wide fame on Voltaire, Diderot and Rosseau. When Mr. Frederick Greenwood retired from the editorship of the Pall Mall Gazette Mr. Morley succeeded him. His tremendous and scathing opposition to Mr. Forster's administration of Ireland swept the Liberal party on into its present position with regard to Irish independence. It was while editor of the Pall Mall Gazette that Mr. Morley wrote his life of Cobden. He ran for Parliament in the constituency where he was born, but was defeated. A year later in 1880 he was again beaten in Westminster; in 1883 New-castle-on-Tyne elected him, and as the coleditor, he has forged to the front of his league of Joe Cowen, the famous party with a rapidity and strength never before seen in the history of English Liberliam. He is a pleasant, affable of and his constituents speak of him as "Jack." a circumstance which is as good as

volumes of praise. WHAT TRACHEOTOMY IS.

It Is Not a Dangerous Operation as Performed on the Crcwn Prince. The operation of tracheotomy recently performed upon the Crown Priace of becomes so choked up that he can not breathe a small incision is made in the windpipe a little way below the Adam's apple. Into this opening a small silver tube is inserted. The tube is curved so as to reach down into the air passage in the throat. Outside the throat it projects a little, and tapes are tied around the neck holding it in posi-

The tube is apt to become choked up with mucous, so the usual course is to have two tubes, one fitting closely within the other, so that it can be removed at will and cleansed and then slid back again.

The cut here given illustrates very accurately the amount of space taken up by the tube. It shows #150 that the operation is below, and so does not touch the vocal chords. But as the patient breathes in and out of the tubes, and so no air passes the vocal chords, he can not talk. In order to articulate he must hold his finger over the or: fice in the tube and do all his talking with the tube closed. To breathe, he must remove his finger, take air into his lungs through the tube, and then, reclosing the orifice, he can go on with the conversation.

One reason why tracheotomy is so generally believed to be exceedingly dangerperformed on children the results are nearly always fatal. It is most frequently done in cases of diphtherinas a last resort and in spite of the relief thus obtained the child often dies of the disease. The reinstantaneous, and a person who is black in the face and on the verge of choking to death in a few mements breathes naturally and seems almost well. The risk to life is hardly appreciable.

In one London hospital—the Central—for diseases of the throat and car, there were nine cases in three months, and in no instance did any injury arise from the opera-
