NYE GOES A-SHOPPING.

works out difficult problems in mathematics by means of a No. 2 hexagon pencil, frequently moistened by touching its point on the soft palate, otherwise you can not be permitted to purchase The alarming frequency of noisy marts of trade, the tremendous multiplicity of busy haunts of men, to say nothing of the vortex of traffic and the hum and buzz of industry-the vortex itself frequently occupying a whole block, and the mart, bum or buzz very often extending even further than that-all unite to throw the buyer and seller together with a loud report in New York.

The result is that the small buyer who goes where he can get the best prices goes home with his front teeth in his vest pocket, and it takes him two weeks to get back the ear which he left hanging on the elevator a home or business property on this plan enjoy all your earnings, and be confident that your family will not be turned into thestreet should you die. My not secure just before the holidays. Of course, he gets other ears, but when a man has become attached to both of his ears he hates to separate them or see them rudely torn apart. He can not be content with the ears of others. Men take pride in ears with freckles and side-whiskers on them sometimes, and refuse to accept the waxen, beautiful but beardless ears of people who have had greater social advantages.

beardless ears of people who have had greater social advantages.

But I started out in my poor, weak way to speak of the matter of shopping. I have shopped in New York and also in the West. In New York I did not enjoy it. In fact, I rarely shop in New York, preferring to go to an interior town, where goods are marked low and the cracker barrel is within the reach of all. I went into a large and teeming mart of trade and frill emporium on Twenty-third street one hot day last summer to buy a pair of suspenders. I did not wish to buy them because I was vain.

It was not with the idea of emphasizing the great gulf between myself and those who had been denied suspenders. It was as a plain American citizen, who desired to submit to the harsh demands of a false but inexorable hot-house air of metropolitan society law, that I went in at the side door of that place. I did not vaunt. I was not puffed up. I did not behave myself in an unseemly manner. I did not intend to give the goods public recognition through the press. I did not intend to wear them on the outside. My idea was simply to go in quietly, select a young woman who was worthy of my confidence, call her away from the vulgar herd and tell her that I had yielded to the false and cruel customs of a sin-cursed metropolis-that I had decided to adopt the effeminate and artificial manners of civilization, and would like to see a pair of red suspenders with blue

In former years I had bought goods of General Worth, at Laramie City, who kept a general store, a hotel and a clear-eyed bull-dog all in one room. The General played chess and colored his whiskers. He did almost every thing except keep store, run a hotel or extract people from his bulldog. In this way customers got into the face wear lines that show not only the dog. In this way customers got into the habit of waiting on themselves and making a memorandum of it in the bright, crisp atmosphere. General Worth had been a masculine saleslady in New York when he was young, and so when anybody came in and spoke about buying any thing he began the sales have about buying any thing he began and spoke about buying any thing he began the sales have the same time, when to regard him with suspicion and treat him life in Morocco; but at the same time, when shamefully, and try to "sick" the dog on him; but after awhile he would run out of profanity and resume his chess and beg rival. people to wait on themselves and not come in there right in the middle of the day, when they knew very well that he was playing chess and couldn't get away. So we all got into the habit of waiting on ourselves, and I acquired notions of credit which in New York do not obtain.

I went into the great surging Twentythird street convention of good clothes, a lone man, borne on the breast of a big tide ment and different railroad depots, as well as all parts of the city, are easily accessible by Street Cars constantly passing the doors. It offers special inducement to those visiting the city for business or pleasure.

Your patropage respectfuly solicited. neither did that fat party who stood on my foot, but finally I got a chance to move up to the counter, where a tired young woman was looking dreamily over the heads of the seething mass, while a row of customers tabbed at her with their parasols.

When the delegations from the valley of the Harlem and beyond Brooklyn and over against Hoboken and farther Gilgal, and the forests of Philadelphia and Fort Lee, and them that dwell in the outermost parts of Steen Hundred and Steenty-steenth street, and in the habitations of Murray Hill, and the dwellers in flats of the money-changers, and them that live over against Tompkinsville, and West Orange, and Pepsin, O., and Kabush and Canada had thinned out a little, I beckoned to the saleslady to put her Barley No. 2. mixed with oats, bought at oats weight and price.

Wheat mixed with Rye bought at rye weigh a thought. She leaned towards me in a reserved way which tickled my nose with the served way which tickled my nose with the rim of her high, intellectual ear. I said to her that I had been waiting a good while, as there was so many others ahead of me, but

Those were my exact words, and yet the papers the next day not only gave a garbled and erroneous account of it, but misspelled my name twice. Thus it came to pass' that the only time I ever tried to buy any thing in New York, when I had the money to do it with, I met with a rebuke that I can not yet fully under-EW YORK is a great stand. In trying to explain it to the authorities afterwards I spoke of my enrest desire has been built up to devote my future life to the use of such a degree there suspenders and other refining influences, that now you have to but they said that surely I knew better > than to try to get suspenders at the corset counter on the first floor, when everybody knew that the suspender department was up seven floors, back of the restaurant and on the left of the wooden-ware department. in charge of an elderly man with thick-set, red Donegals and a heavily-embossed nose Rather than admit that I didn't know New York intimately, from Castle Garden to three o'clock a. m., I settled the matter and got a pair of good suspenders from a man who does a quiet business on the side walk at the corner of Fulton street and Broadway, I believe, unless he has moved his store up to Park Row.

> He did not show that air of reluctance and extreme anguish over being separated from his suspenders which we notice in the large dealer. I paid him forty cents for the pair j got of him, and was told afterwards that I could have purchased the same goods on Twenty-Third street for thirty-nine cents. The reason thirty-nine cents, or twenty nine cents, or nineteen cents, or nine cents is the price, as I understand it, is that it gives an opportunity to the saleslady to ship your goods to Fort Hamilton, where they are done up and returned, while your forty cents go to Wall street and pass through a clearing house, a house of detention, quarantine and a receiving vault. You then get a cent back, miss your boat home and have to stop at the hotel all night > at a cost of $4.85. Certainly Western merchants seem to suffer less remorse when they part with their goods than the merchants of New York, if we may judge the New York merchant by the person who represents him, who stands behind the counter in order to obstruct 'trade and throw obstacles in the way of traffic. Freer trade is what we need, and as a property-owner in New York, a tax payer and the polished head of a family, I think, for one, that we ought to get together and talk this matter over. Otherwise people are going to Omaha and Kansas City to buy their goods .- Bill Nye, in N. Y. World.
