

GERMANY MOURNS

Emperor Frederick's Struggle For Life Ended.

DEATH CAME WITHOUT PAIN

He Was Conscious and Recognized His Friends to the Last.

Before He Died He Joined the Hands of Bismarck and Victoria as Though Anxious to Effect a Reconciliation—Surrounded by His Personal and Official Family at the Last Holding His Wife's Hand, With His Son and Successor Standing at His Side—The Funeral to be Held on Monday—Short Sketch of King William II.

POTSDAM, June 16.—Emperor Frederick is dead. His long struggle with death has ended, and all Germany mourns. His bed was surrounded by members of his personal and official family from early yesterday morning until the end. He was apparently conscious most of the time, and suffered little pain. His death was quiet and peaceful.

The last illness visited by the doctors was fixed to a few days, but it could be easily read. It was the original document, with the autographs of the doctors, instead of the usual copy. Shortly after it was posted there was a sudden commotion in the castle and courtyard. Servants were hurrying in and out, with expressions of despair upon their faces. Crown Prince William had been walking in the emperor's courtyard, stopping from time to time to look towards the house.

The emperor's hand was raised on large pillows; his hands rested on the coverlet. Dr. Mackenzie stood between the bed and a table covered with instruments and medicines. The crown prince stood opposite him. The empress was seated at the foot of the bed, but later she knelt at the bedside, and remained in this position during the last hours watching her dying husband's faint gasps for breath.

During the night the emperor had beckoned her to his side. As she bent over him he murmured a single word, then short sentences which she alone understood.

At the foot of the bed knelt the emperor's daughters, Prince Henry and the two daughters.

KING WILLIAM II AND THE CROWN PRINCE.

Queen's oldest daughter, yet his sympathies are far from English. The marriage which his mother arranged for him is one reason for his dislike of her and incidentally of her country. His wife is another Victoria, the Princess Augusta Victoria, daughter of Frederick, Duke of Schleswig-Holstein. They were married in his wife's 23d year at Berlin, on Feb. 27, 1851. She is not of royal blood nor of personal beauty, and their married life is said to be ideal. They are rarely seen together, and it is not likely that the reign now opening will present such a spectacle of confidence on the one side and wifely influence on the other as marked his father's closing hours. Their family consists of four sons. The oldest was born May 6, 1852, and to distinguish him, now crown prince, among the tangle of Fredericks and Williams in the German royal family, it is necessary to give him all his names, viz., Frederick William Victor Auguste Ernest. The other sons are, respectively, 5 years, 4 years and 1 year old.

King William was partially educated at Bonn, under a French teacher. In 1852 he observed the administrative methods of Dr. Asschembach, president of the province of Brandenburg. He went through the governmental routine with great appreciation and intelligence. Once a fortnight he went for a visit—which was practically a lesson—to Bismarck. The young student guest was described by some as his "tool" and others as his "disciple."

There is another and more significant side to the emperor's training. He handled a musket before he did a primer, and with great relish. He was perfect in the "school of the soldier" before he could spell, and now he is lacking in no details which can qualify a man to command an army.

Harold Frederic describes him thus in The New York Times: "Imagine to yourself a young man in his 30th year, 6 feet in height, straight as an ash sapling, with finely formed, slender limbs, narrow hips, swelling chest and square, broad shoulders, with a small head on a long, full-throated neck, bald forehead, a high, oval face, with an aquiline effect of profile, clear cut, strong chin, bended nose, prominent though not high cheek bones, and good, open forehead—all as regular in ensemble as a Greek triumphal arch, light brown hair, close cut behind, but longer on the crown, and rising from the temples to form a sort of ridge from the parting across the brow, and a yellowish mustache loosely curled up at the ends—and you have such a portrait as words can paint of the coming German emperor."

"On this fair picture there is one blot. By an accident at his birth his left arm was crippled, and is a nearly useless member. It hangs across his body as though in an invisible sling, and the misformed hand is always gloved in public. He also suffers from ancestral scrofula."

On Feb. 8, at a dinner in honor of the Brandenburg provincial diet, in proposing the toast of the province, William gave this clue to his policy as emperor: "In my rides through Brandenburg in the course of the maneuvers, the flourishing fields and the trades which I found in full activity clearly showed me where the true foundations of national prosperity and fruitful labor were to be found. I am well aware that the public at large, especially abroad, impute to me a thoughtless inclination for war and a craving for glory. God preserve me from such criminal levity! I repudiate such imputations with indignation. But still, gentlemen, I am a soldier, and all Brandenburgers are soldiers. This I know. Therefore let me conclude with the words which on Monday last our great chancellor addressed to the Reichstag, which on that day showed us the grand spectacle of the popular representation going locked hand in hand with the government. Let me conclude by adapting to Brandenburg that sentence: 'We Brandenburgers only fear God, and nothing else in this world.'"

Had Her Grave Ready and Took Poison. MIDDLETOWN, Conn., June 17.—Mrs. Hannah Graham committed suicide Saturday evening by taking a dose of Roush on Hata. Saturday afternoon she engaged some workmen to clear up the family lot where her husband was buried. When they returned she said they had an opportunity to carry her there in a few hours. Soon afterwards she took the poison, and expired before medical aid could be obtained.

Damaged by a Storm. HONESDALE, Pa., June 15.—A terrific hail storm has passed over Honesdale and Berlin townships, Wayne county. Much property, a little hamlet in Berlin, has been destroyed. Windows of dwellings not protected by shutters were broken. Garages and fields of grain were destroyed and trees stripped of their foliage. Two barns were struck by lightning, one in Berlin, belonging to ex-Commissioner Williams, and one in Texas, owned by Nicholas Wipard. In the latter four little boys were playing, one of whom, aged 8 years, was killed and another stunned so that he remained unconscious several hours. Neither barn was burned.

NOTICE OF APPEALS.—NOTICE IS hereby given that Appeals will be held at the Commissioners' office, in Bellefonte, for the different townships during the following periods: For the townships of Beaver, Patton, and Spring—Monday, June 18. For the townships of Harris, Curtin, Liberty, and Howard—Tuesday, June 19. For the townships of Marion, Walker, Boggs, and Millsboro—Wednesday, June 20. When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria, When she was a child, she cried for Castoria, When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria, When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

SOME DOCTORS honestly admit that they can't cure Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Chorea and Calfic (or) St. Vitus' Dance. They say they can't cure it—Castoria does. That's the secret of its success. Years of trial have proved it to be a quick, safe, sure cure.

In my own family I have used it as a last resort, the user having suffered from Rheumatism for years and having been treated for the disease by different physicians in this state and in other parts without even temporary relief. Upon my recommendation scores of people have used the remedy with the same results claimed for it. C. H. WEAVER, Danbury, Iowa, Jan. 8, 1888.

GOING WEST.

The general interest that has been taken in the opening of the Montana Indian Reservation is shown by the large number of people who have already gone to Great Falls to investigate the mineral and agricultural resources of that wonderful country. The low excursion rate announced by C. H. Warren, Gen. Pass. Agent of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway, makes the expense of exploring this country merely nominal, and will undoubtedly result in a still larger number following.
