FARM NOTES.

ADVANTAGES SECURED IN HAVING FLUM TREES IN THE POULTRY YARD .- The plum is almost unknown to some fruit farms, having been driven out of existence by the curculio, yet it is considered one of the most delicious fruits grown in this latitude. The most successful plum-growers are those who combine poultry-raising (plum trees in the poultry yards) with fruit-growing. The peach has been found to thrive better in the poultry yard than anywhere else, and with changeable yards, so as to remove the hens when occasion demands, the straw-berry gives excellent results when the poultry yard is given up to it. But the greatest advantage is secured when plum trees are planted in the yards, as they thrive and do well, while the lator of preventing the attacks of the currention is a secure of this store strength to the stomach and enable it to per-form its functions. The symptoms of Dyspepsia disappear, and with them the flability of the sys-tem to contract diseases. Take the medicine ao-cording to directions, and observe what we say in "Faise and True." "Send a letter stamp to DR. RADWAY & CO., No. 32 Warren Street, New York, for "Faise and True." yard than anywhere else, and with lator of preventing the attacks of the curculio is greatly lessened by the aid of the fowls. There are two profits" derived on a small space, and at the same time the labor is no greater, while the soil is increased in fertility. The plan is to have the fowls divided into flocks of twenty-five, with two yards to each flock so as to permit of changing the hens from one yard to another, as occasion demands, the object being to permit of spading the yards, thus turning under the manure, and also to grow some kind of early-maturing green food, such as mustard, radisb, etc., thereby reducing the cost of food, as well as securing a larger supply of eggs, experience teaching that fowls do not thrive as well on an exclusive diet of grain as when given grain at night with green or bulky food during the day. The frequent changing of the fowls from one yard to another also prevents cholera, gapes in chicks and other diseases induced by filthy yards. The plum trees supply shade to the fowls in summer, and as they will resort to the tree for shade and to hunt for insects, they protect the trees from damage. The jarring of the trees in order to cause the curculio to fall is still practiced, but the hens destroy them as soon as they reach the ground. On one poultry farm near Lancaster, Mass., where 3000 fowls have occasionally been kept, all the yards contain plum trees, and the owner reports that he has no difficulty in securing good crops, while other trees, not in the poultry yard, bear nothing. Of the varieties of plums that will bear under these conditions may be mentioned the well-known damson, gage, Lombard and wild goose, which are, however, subject to rot in unfavorable seasons. But little attention is ne cessary for the trees other than jarring them, as the hens keep the weeds down.

As soon as the hen is removed from the nest to the coop, give a little food, consisting of fine oatmeal, or bread soaked in milk, which is continued three or four days, with an occasional hard boiled egg, which is then gradually changed to any variety suitable to their age, until they are able to eat cracked corn, wheat and other whole grains, when the labor in feeding will be greatly reduced. A little meal and finely chopped vegetables will be useful occasionally, especially as long as they are kept in limited quarters. THERE are many good remedies for the destruction of the cabbage worm. Kerosene is excellent, but it imparts its odor to the cabbage, which remains even until the cabbage is cooked. A sprinkling of pyrethrum over the plants is excellent, but it only serves as a preventive, the difficulty being to reach the worm after it enters the cabbage without injuring the cabbage. The white butterfly is the parent of the cabbage worm, and if a close watch be kept and every white butterfly destroyed, which is not difficult, by catching them, there will be no cabbage worms.

THE squash bugs will now be busy. and the best mode of destroying them is to go over the vines early in the morning and kill them with the hands. In that manner one or two visits will save the vines. A solution made by disolving a pound of saltpetre in a tub a few pats of butter, add a cupful of of soapsuds and sprinking the vines will serve as a liquid fertilizer and partially prevent the ravages of the bugs.

THE German wax bean will be found an excellent variety. It is tender, of beautiful appearance, and is not stringy, like the Mohawk or Valentine varieties, They grow rapidly and bear pods in large clusters. Every garden should have them, and they thrive best in the warm season.

WEAK rose bushes may be made to grow by giving them an occasional watering of liquid manure. It should not be too strong. An application once a week is better than applying a large quantity at once. Always stir the soil after the ground becomes dry,

ONE advantage in keeping the soil loose is that when a shower comes, no matter how hard, the water does not run off, but goes down into the soil whereas if the surface of the soil be hard some of the water will run off during a heavy shower. Hence cultivation not only protects the plants during a dry season but enables the soil to absorb a large proportion of water when rain talls.

IT has been demonstrated that while the pinching back of the shoots of ns will induce the vines to throw out laterals, and also produce a larger number, of melons, the process does not increase the size of the fruit.
