FARM NOTES.

THE CARE OF HALF-GROWN TURKEYS .- Many house-keepers who give their young turkeys a great deal of care and attention when they are quite small, appear to think them fully able to take care of themselves after they are half-grown.

To stop feeding them entirely, saying that the flock picks up so much small grain and so many insects in the fields that they do not need any food at night. So the mother hens begin to feel very independent, having the whole care of their family on their shoulders, and pretty soon forget to come home at all, but stop in the fields or the woods, wherever night catches them, and either fly up in the trees to roost where the young ones become an easy prey to the owls, or perch upon the fences within reach of passing thieves. And before very long half of the young turkeys have disappeared, and the poultry raiser is loudly lamenting her "bad luck" to all the neighbors.

All this can be easily avoided by teaching them to come home every night, and the thought of a good supper awaiting them is a great inducement; even if their crops are full of grasshoppers a small quantity of broken bread is very much relished, and especially a pan of buttermilk. Fowls are very foud of milk, either sweet or sour, and nothing is more wholesome.

FROTECTING ANIMALS FROM FLIES .- At this season of the year the annoyance caused to animals by files and mosquitoes often amounts to positive agony, and at all times, in what is called good corn weather, it is sufficient to prevent the stock eating enough to keep them in good condition. The animals will stand in the water or pass the greater part of the day in the shade. rather than expose themselves to the sun-shine, going out to eat only when driven by hunger. They quickly lose flesh, the flow of milk shrinks, and a loss is incurred that cannot be easily made good again. At all times a good feed of grain is beneficial to stock, but it's especially so when files are very annoying, since it will do much to prevent shrinkage of flesh and milk. Horses and milch cows may be protected, in a great measure at least, by wiping them all over with a sponge dipped in soapsuds in which a little carbolic acid has been mixed. Bulls confined in stables often suffer enough from the attacks of flies to drive them half mad, and there is no doubt that the continued fretting caused in this way develops a savage disposition. The most satisfactory results have fol- midst of them. Make a pound of puff lowed from sponging, with soapsuds paste as follows: Take a half pound of and carbolic acid mixed, a Jersey bull flour, dry it, and sift it, and make it contined in a stall.

IT is said that if a three-quarter-inch hole be bored in apple trees affected with the "bitter-rot," and the same filled with salaratus and then plugged up, it will effectually remedy the evil. A correspondent says that he used this remedy on an old orchard a few years ago, the fruit of which was not worth gathering, while since that time the fruit on such of the trees as are still living has been all that could be desired.

THE grape rot is doing great damage in New Jersey this season. In all cases where the copperas solution has been tried the results so far have been favorable. Though not entirely preventing the ravages of the disease the spraying of the vines with the solution has greatly mitigated the effects on the crop.

THE best fertilizers for grapes are bone meal and potash. Unground bones are slower in action than the meal, but a bushel of them buried at the roots of a vine will, in time, be taken up and transformed into grapes. Wood ashes and home made soft soap suds furnish potash.

PROFESSOR A. J. COOK, of Michigan, says that neither copperas, suiphur, phosphates nor potash has proved effectual in his state against the yellows in peach trees. The only way to pre-vent the spread of the disease is to root out and burn all effected trees throughout the country on showing symptoms of an attack.
