Sarah's Last Sensation

An Exciting Chapter in the Sharon-Hill Case.

CURSES AND BLOWS IN COURT.

Sarah Althea Hill Terry Violently Denounces the Judge-He Orders Her Removed, and Her Husband Knocks Down the Officer-Wild Confusion.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4.-A sensational scene was enacted in the United states circuit court, when Justice Field read the decision of the court sustaining the previous decision that the alleged marriage contract between Sarah Althea Hill and the late Senator Sharon was a forgery, and that the executors of the Sharon will may proceed without regard to Miss Hill, who is now Mrs. Terry, having married Judge David S. Terry, her counsel. As the reading of the decision proceeded, Mrs. Terry became excited, and jumping up interrupted Justice Field, inquiring if he was about to order her to give up the marriage contract. The judge told her to sit down, whereupon she grew wild with passion, and shouted that it was said that Judge Field had been bought; that she would like to know what figure he valued himself at; that it seemed no one could get justice in that court without a Judge Field ordered Marshal Franks to remove Mrs. Terry. Franks moved towards her, while she continued to pour out oaths and vulgar language. As Franks took hold of her arm, Judge Terry knocked him down with a terrible blow, declaring that he would let no living man touch his wife. Franks recovered himself, and with deputies and bystanders rushed upon Terry and dragged ing his gums on the him out of court. Mrs. Terry was locked up in the marshal's office. Terry soon advanced not spank him and upon the deputy guarding the room and demanded admission. Being refused, he drew an ugly looking dirk, with an eight inch blade, and threatened to carve his way into the room. Several men jumped upon him and there was a desperate struggle. All finally fell in a heap, and the knife was taken away without any one being injured. Terry was then locked up with his wife. A sachel dropped by Mrs. Terry in the the court room was found to contain an English bulldog revolver, with six chambers loaded.

Marshal Franks afterward entered the marshal's room, and was attacked and beaten about the face and head by Mrs. Terry. A strong guard was then placed in the room. There was great excitement in the court room during the fracas. The room was full of leading lawyers and citizens, attracted by the news that the decision was to be rendered. After quiet was restored Justice Field finished reading the decision and the court retired. When they returned they announced a sentence of six months' imprisonment for Judge Terry and thirty days for Mrs. Terry for contempt of court. Since the decision above referred to was first rendered the state supreme court has adjudged that Sharon was married to Miss Hill, and that she is entitled to part of his estate. The executors applied to the circuit court for a revival of the decree of forgery, and this was the matter decided.

Terry was formerly judge of the California supreme court, and in 1856, while holding that position, he killed Senator Broderick in a duel growing out of politics.

TO BAR JOHN CHINAMAN. Congressman Scott's Bill Passed by the House. WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 .- Mr. Scott, of Pennsylvania, by unanimous consent introduced the following bill supplementing the act approved May 6, 1882, to execute certain treaty stipulations relating to the Chinese: Section 1 provides that from and after the passing of this act it shall be unlawful for any Chinese laborer, who has been or who may now be, or who may hereafter be a resident within the United States, and who shall have departed therefrom and shall not have returned before the passing of this act, to return to the United States.

Section 2 provides that no certificates of identity provided for in the 4th and 5th sections of the act to which this is a supplement shall hereafter be issued; and every certificate heretofore issued in pursuance thereof is hereby declared void and of no effect; and the Chinese laborer claiming admittance by virtue thereof shall not be permitted to enter the United States.

Section 3 provides that all duties pre-scribed and liabilities, penalties and for-feitures prescribed by the 2d, 10th, 11th and 12th sections of the act to which this is a supplement, are hereby extended and made applicable to the provisions of that act. Section 4 provides that all such part or parts of the act to which this is a supplement as are inconsistent herewith are hereby Mr. Scott stated that if the report as to the rejection of the Chinese treaty was correct, or if the treaty was hereafter ratified there was nothing in the bill in violation of any treaty.

The bill was passed without division.

HEARINGS ON THE TARIFF.

The Senate Sub-Committee Nearly Through with Them.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Senator Allison, chairman of the sub-committee of the senate mittee on finance, baving in preparation the tariff bill, says the hearings which have been held almost daily since May 26 last will be closed within ten days, and he gives notice to all interests desiring hearings that they must appear before Sept. 8. The subcommittee has confined its hearings mostly to senators and representatives, as they have been enabled to present the wishes of many more persons interested in the changes of the tariff laws than could otherwise have been heard, but a large number of private citizens from every section of the country have been heard. The hearings have been with open doors, and stenographers have taken the testimony for the use of congress and the people at large, and it has been printed as rapidly as taken. The bill is to be laid before the committee, in accordance with the action of the Republican senatorial conference Thursday night, within ten days, and is to be reported to the senate very soon there-

BILL NYE'S SUNDAY CHATTER.

He Tells Something of His Multifarious Correspondence—The Dude and His Cane Handle—The Remarkable Experience of Mr. Visscher as a Public Entertainer-A Truly Good Father Who Failed to Discipline His Son Properly-A Few Remarks on Humor.

是

GENTLEMAN in my line of life receives a great many curious letters.

"Alfarita," Albuquerque, N. M., writes to know if jeweled garters and garters with gold and silver buckles, costing enormous prices, are being worn in New York, as stated in the fashion columns of the press

They are, Alfarita, they are. That is not Beautiful live beetles with slender gold chains attached to their bodies and costly little mice with ruby eyes are sold by the same jewelers, so that the purchaser of jeweled garters need not be absolutely destitute of something to get frightened at.

Henry Reimbold writes to ask what he can do to wean his nineteen-year-old son, who is his joy and pride, from the buckhorn head of a four-pound cane. 1 do not know that I have heretofore answered this inquiry, though it has been frequently sent It is a serious matter, but if properly managed can be brought to a successful conclusion. Take the cane from him for half a day at a time, substituting moistened bread crumbs and sugar tied up together in the corner of a clean piece of linen, but do not let him cry too hard at night if he has been in the habit of coolnot spank him and harshly take the cane away from him, but give him the substitute and lull him to rest by singing to him. Gradually you will win him from it, no doubt, but if all other methods fail cover the head of the cane with twoparts tar-roofing and eight parts Rough on Rats. He will not die in the house.

William O'Mera writes that he has been the author of several thoughts which friends have since told him were thought by other gentlemen and cashed in over one hundred years ago. He is entirely unconscious, he says of plagiarism, and wants to know if such things ever occur to others.

They do sometimes, Mr. O'Mera, but not frequently. The most notable instance, per haps, was that of William Lightfoot Visscher, originally of Kentucky, afterwards of Missouri, Kansas, Illinois, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Nebraska and California. Mr. Visscher was gifted by nature with a wealth of ripe, red nose and a paucity of hair which induced the railroads in California to run excursion trains down to San Francisco for the benefit of those who had never seen him. Mr. Visscher was born very plain and he has added to it. He was, perhaps, the reddest child ever born in Kentucky, but as he grew older this angry color left the rest of his body and flocked around his nose. He has grown plainer and plainer as time passed, until leading comedians go thousands of miles to study him and try and make up like him. But withal he is a real old-fashioned Kentucky gentleman at heart, as kind as a kitten, and with one of the widest range of acquaintances of any newspaper man in America. Many years ago, when the country was new, Mr. Visscher took a troupe down through Southern California by team for the purpose of playing one-night towns. He had previously made several thousand dollars by acting on the suggestion of an old-time bonanza man of San Francisco, and so he bought several teams and spring wagons and started out to give the people who were remote from railroads a wholesome idea of the drama. The company played mostly in school-houses which had an odor of education in them and rat-holes in the floor. These school-houses had no scenery whatever, but mainly a blackboard, on which was inscribed by the last boy who left the building in the afternoon:

The devil flew from north to south With old Miggins in his mouth, But when he found he had a fool

He left him here to teach our school. Visscher's stage manager, who also took care of the team, was bitterly disappointed in many of the stage effects, and asked Visscher what he had better do. Visscher said that it would be a good idea between acts to write in a plain, clear hand on the blackboard what scenery and topography of > country were supposed to be. They tried it, and won a good deal of applause. Visscher, with a countenance on him which reflected credit on the green-room of nature, would come forth with a graceful bow and a piece of chalk, whereupon, amidst thunders of applause he would write on the blackboard: This scene represents a ship at sea. Loud bellering of tempest and slosh of sea.

Elements at war with MR. VISSCHER. each other, more or iess. Ship broaches to and luffing on jib fails to right her. Even the underwriter can not right her. Solitary horseman seen to approach L. U. E. and walk down C. More tempest, with squirts of spray and indications of rain. More believing of tempest; and tourists heard in an amateur way engaged in prayer of R. U. E., etc., etc. Visscher made the Southern California circuit in this way till he got too cour-ageous and tried it in Mexico. There he did not succeed, as the Mexicans had very little imagination and stated that Visscher was no Wayno. He then returned to San Francisco, putting up lightning rods as he went. He had previously put up every thing else he had.

But he was sure that this was a new idea in the matter of scenery, and so he had resolved to form a syndicate and introduce it on account of the great saving it made in presenting the drama. When he got back to San Francisco a friend asked him to go one evening and see a Chinese play. Visscher said he didn't mind going to witness a fragment of it, so they went, and about the first feature Visscher noticed was the custom of hanging out a little red wash bill with wormy character and fire-cracker poetry on it between each act.

Visscher asked what it meant, and his visacher asked what it meant, and his guide told him it was simply descriptive of what the scenery was supposed to be, and saved the expense of having scenery painted and mounted for each change.

So the thing that Visacher thought he had invented and could make a fortune from had been in use five or six thousand years among a gang of idolaters who wear their shirts on the outside of their pantaloons and cut off the heads of dishonest and treacherous officials, so as to give the others a chance. Truths are all old, Mr. O'Mera, and so we have to rely on men like General Badeau for our novelties. P. G., Georgetown, D. C., writes: "What had I better do with a grown son of mine who is bringing my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave? I have been blessed with three children, but my old heart is left desolate now at a time when I am in the yeller leaf of life. My first boy was the most affectionate little feller you ever see. 'most, and I naturally took to him a good deal, but folks told me that if I didn't look out I'd like him better than I did God, and so I curbed myself and was tolerably strick with him as regards rules, and denied myself whenever I had a tendency to think too much of him.

People told me that God was down on parents that made too much of their children, and so I never really had that enjoyment with the boy that I would if I hadn't a-felt that I ortn't to 'rouse Divine jellussy. Neighbors warned me that if I thought too much of the little feller God would snatch him out of my sight quicker'n scat. However, I must have broken over the rules some way 'r uther, for the boy missteerous ly died when he was six years old, and L concluded that it stood me in hand to look out more in future not to lay myself open to Divine rath, for I'd tested of it onct.

"I rastled with my grief the best I could and resolved that, with the other two children, I wouldn't lay myself open to crit-tysism, I tried to look on these two children like a disinterested party ort to, and when I'd be tempted to lay aside the rules and have fun with them I'd controle myself and sock a doste of dissyplin to 'em that ort to convince any body that I wasn't going to allow no children of mine to come in beteen me and eternal salvation.
"But what's the result?"

"The girl is there in New York some where giving herself up to gayity, and when I went on to see her last fall and paid $22 to get there and home again, I found that the place where she had directed me to, or the place where she was at, according to her letters, was a vacant lot on Ninety-ninth street. "The other boy is here with us in the home nest. He is twenty-eight years old, but says the home nest is good enough for him. His great fort is to find out what the rules is and then not quite bust 'em. He is a quiet, gentlemanly feller as regards rules and nobody ever ketched him at any thing He has got a little job press that he earned gitting up a club for a paper last year. On this he prints cards for other young people, on which is the statement:

Miss, may I see you home?

"He had a tendency at one time to run to the papers a good deal and got too fond of our coarse American youmor, I thought, and so I punished him so severely that I didn't know but he would get mad and leave the home nest, but he controlled himself and is still with us. He is a large, strong man now and ort to rustle for his daily bread, but he shudders when I mention his going away from the old roof-tree, as he calls it He quit reading the course American youmor in the papers when I punished him, but broke out in a new spot, I find, for two weeks ago I dropped on his game. He has been doing a good deal of job work off and on all winter, and sending off a lot of mail and getting a good deal, too, I thought, but till now find that he has compiled a little book of two hundred pages and printed it himself, and he is sending it allover the country broadcast for fifty cents and postage. It is a book which is made up of the broadest youmor and anedotes from the Old Testament, and he has had the gall to dedicate it to A. Comstock, of your town. "It honestly would make your hair stand up on end to read it, for it has been put together with dyabollykle skill and yet the law can't touch him. He is reaping a rich harvest and taking his meals in the home nest. What shall I do! He threatens to buy two more jop presses and get his mother and me to jerk 'em en this book.

What would be your advice!"
You must refuse to accede to his demands. Both of you must be firm and tell him that you will not kick a jobber under these cir cumstances. You have made several mistakes, perhaps, but it is not yet too late. You have some at last to the place where you should have comes at first. Tell him that rather than submit to his demands you would run away and leave him. Do not say it in a saucy or impudent way, but tell him firmly that you can not do so and then await the result. Probably your first error was in believing that God is irritated when He finds that parents are too fond of their children, and that He thereupon takes a case of croup to that house and chokes those children to death, so that He can have a controlling interest in the whole affliction business.

Humor is a luxury and yet it is a necessity. Every body is permitted to use his own taste and discretion in selecting his style of humor, but you can rest assured he is going to have it in some form or other. Humor like religion, needs purification, and all is not humor that calls itself so; but whether it be in music, in art, in literature, on the stage or in the pulpit, it is doing more in a good-natured way toward distiguring the features of error and fraud than many more rpretentious agencies. In the first place, it has a bigger audience. In the second place, it has a good-natured audience. in the third place, you can laugh a stub-born man out of a folly when you can not knock him out of it.

You can ridicule him out of it when you can not preach him out of it or pray him out of it. Therefore let a purified and exalted humor keep the sinner good-natured while it makes folly appear foolish and paves the way for what is more profound. In the meantime, P. G., be firm with your son, Tell him firmly that rather than to give up to him, you and your wife will run away from the old roof-tree and never, never come back again. Try at the same time to avoid fixing your affections so firmly on your son that it may be thrown up to you through all eternity.

The book you alluded to is a singular publication, indeed, and shows that your son has a certain kind of genius. It is a sort of genius, however, which, finding itself mmed in by your harsh and inflexible rules, has taken such materials as it found and has sought to utilize them. What you call the broad humor and anecdote of the Old Testament are matters which I would rather not criticise. Having published several books myself, I have made it a rule never to criticise other authors. Your son has not gone into this work in the right spirit, evidently, but the con-summate genius with which he has evaded the law and the payment of royalty to the author is worthy of General Jay Gould or Colonel Satan.—Bill Nye, in N. Y. World.

From this point the career of Grover Cleveland belongs to the history of the nation, and it is needless to rehearse it in these columns. The criticism of this blography, however, upon Mr Cleveland's work as Governor, being largely a matter of fact, is well worth reprinting.

Of the book before us it may be said that it is a valuable and excellent work, one in which great compass and variety have not lead to the sacrifice of literary grace and interest. It is, indeed, almost a library of reference. Space forbids any such extended comment upon the excellent review of the life of Allen G. Thurman, as has been given to that of the Fresident. In addition to these leading topics will be found cacord of the Democratic National Convention of 1888 inclinding platform and resolutions, a statement of the feestiny.
