Paice College is a college that "values its students." What it has not been made up of artificial means.

The following is an extract from a history of Philadelphia, which has been exceptionally fortunate in the success of the students who have graduated therefrom.

It is doubtful if very many Philadelphia boys know the extent and importance of the work that has been done in the history of this city and of the world.

Newspaper Comment on the President's Message.

GREAT MANY SHADES OF OPINION

Some Say It is a Great Paper, and Will Inspire Every Reader with Profound Admiration--Others Say It is Stale, Platitudinous and Extremely Amusing.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 4.--The Sun says: "Mr. Cleveland writes with the authority and power of a man whose conviction is full, and whose information is full, and with that air of confidence which springs from the consciousness that the truth, like other great forces, continues to move on and grow, notwithstanding the efforts of heretic politicians to destroy it.

Regarding the message, the paper writes: "The message is exceedingly full and well written. It is a fitting supplement to the able state papers President Cleveland has given the country, and of no public servant, in this generation at least, can it be more truly said than of himself that he has constantly guarded the rectitude of his intentions, maintained unswerving his love of country and with unselfish purpose striven for the public good."

"The message lacks the vigor, spirit and individuality heretofore conspicuous in his official writings and conveys the impression that the president has suddenly tired of his duties and has relaxed his grip upon the helm of the old ship of state. He nowhere rises above the commonplace, except in his introduction, which is a laborious, pedantic and uninteresting piece of writing."

"The message lacks the vigor, spirit and individuality heretofore conspicuous in his official writings and conveys the impression that the president has suddenly tired of his duties and has relaxed his grip upon the helm of the old ship of state."

DUTIES OF POLICE AND RIGHTS OF CITIZENS.

The personal rights of citizens as against a policeman making an uncalculated or illegal arrest, is the subject of much litigation, but with the average policeman, as well as citizens, there is not a very clear comprehension of the legal principles and possibilities.

In a case tried before Judge Allison in Philadelphia the other day he repeated the law governing in such matters, and it is just as well it should be impressed on the public mind, for it not infrequently happens the well disposed citizen finds himself in conflict with the guardian of the public peace.

"An officer," said the Judge, "may arrest without a warrant for an offense which he sees committed, or that has been recently committed, and the offender is escaping. He may also arrest without a warrant where a felony has been committed, or where he has reasonable grounds of belief that it has been recently committed, and the person whom he arrests he has reasonable ground to believe is the offender."

But his best plan is to go to a magistrate and get a warrant, for if he makes the arrest without it he does so at his own risk. Says the Judge:

If it should turn out that he was mistaken in the man, or that a felony was not committed, and he had made the arrest without a warrant, he would be responsible in a civil suit for damages for that arrest, and also for damages for any violence he may have committed upon the persons he arrested. An officer has no right to arrest for a misdemeanor without a warrant, except where he sees the misdemeanor committed. For instance, a man may go to an officer and say: "I want you to arrest that man. He assaulted me. The officers reply should be: "I did not see it. You must go before a magistrate and get a warrant."

If an officer makes an arrest without a warrant under such circumstances, he becomes a wrongdoer himself, and if he inflicts violence upon his prisoner he is responsible therefor.

Then as to the right of the citizen in the matter of illegal arrest, Judge Allison puts the case very clearly.

What is the duty of a citizen if arrested when he has violated no law? A citizen is not bound to submit to an illegal arrest, and he may use force enough to resist it, but no more. It might be judicious for him to submit quietly and seek reparation for the injury afterwards, but if an officer undertakes to make an illegal arrest, it is the same as if a private citizen did it, for an officer is protected by the law only when executing the law. Among the most sacred rights possessed in this country is that of personal immunity, and when officers violate it the citizen can use all the force that is necessary to resist.
