Asrepresentative of the Vatican. As-sistant Secretary Wharton said that he knew nothing about the matter, but he thought it was not likely that a nuncio would come. Mr. Walker Blaine, when asked about it, said: "We have, of course, never recognized the pope as a temporal ruler, and have never sent him an envoy. Our minister to that region has been accredited to the Italian government, and if there has ever been any occasion for communicating with government, and if there has ever been any occasion for communicating with the Vatican it has been done through the minister. I do not think that a papal representative has ever been sent to this country. It is a grave question whether or not one would be received if he came, a question that would have to be discussed over at the White House, and I have not the slightest idea of how it would be decided. I do not believe in the rumor."
