THE MOLLY MAGUIRES

Their Reign of Terror in Pennsylvania Recalled.

COFFIN NOTICES AGAIN CURRENT.

Mine Bosses in the Vicinity of Girardville and Shenandoah Receive Warnings in the Old Familiar Form-A Tea Peddlar Has a Narrow Escape.

GIRARDVILLE, Pa., Feb. 7.-For several weeks past a number of mine bosses and prominent citizens have received anonymous criminal communications similar to those received during the reign of the Molly Maguires. During the reign of terror, mining bosses par-ticularly, seemed to be the objects of hatred to the worst members of the community, and in the language of the times, they were among the first to receive coffin notices. Rumor, ever busy, never before had so much attention bestowed upon her utterances, but in spite of all the ferocity and horrid wickedness attributed to the members of that society, nothing that was related or ever imagined, was as bad as the reality.

Suggestive Warnings.

At first, perhaps, a chance of life was allowed. A coffin notice would be nailed against the house or in some conspicuous place, or perhaps mailed. This notice would inform the one receiving it that such a length of time, generally a week, would be allowed him to reave the country, and would also convey the information that the alternative was his

John Williams, who sells tea through this region, received a notice to discontinue his visits to this section, unless he desired to meet his fate. No attention was paid to the threat, and Thursday night, while driving from Shenandoah, several masked men waylaid him amid a volley of bullets, his horse carrying him safely over the mountains through the darkness of night.

To Abolish Trusts.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 7 .- The Fow antitrust bill came back to the house with a favorable report. This is a sweeping measure, and is calculated to give the trustees and combiners the cold shivers. The bill was not altered in the least in the committee. It applies to corporations and associations, whether incorporated or not, business firms or shareholders, interdicting a combination to control the manufacture or sale of any article. The bill provides for a fine of $10,000 upon any individual or business firm violating the law, while the governor is authorized to revoke the charter of any guilty corporation.

MINERS SAVED.

The Three Imprisoned Men at Nanticoke Rescued.

proval the concurrent resolution of the senate providing for the printing and distribution of 10,000 copies of the govand Michael Shelank, have been rescued. These men, it will be remembered, were imprisoned in the Grand Tunnel colliery last Wednesday by a flood of water which broke upon them from an underground working which the foreman, Thomas Lewis, let loose upon them by a blast, and from which three others narrowly escaped. The resolution requesting the United States senators from Pennsylvania to further the passage of the elections bill was read. The communication now lays on the table until the house is informed | way and reach the place where the men

Joy at Their Rescue.

They hailed their rescuers with glad shouts. They were suffering terribly from thirst, but said they did not feel severely the pangs of hunger, although all three were very weak. They were all three were very weak wild with joy when their rescuers reached them, and hugged and kissed them frantically. Milk was at once given them as nourishment. They were carried upon improvised stretchers across the water upon the shoulders of men who waded. The place where they found safety was but six feet above the height reached by the water, and this small space at the head of a cross heading was their only refuge until help came. The men neither slept nor moved from their narrow quarters. They were taken from the mine to their home shortly after 6 o'clock. The little village is wild with joy over the escape of the men.

How the Miners Were Rescued. The men were found in an almost exhausted condition from their 115 hours' imprisonment, and will require care to bring them through. Their sufferings have been intense, but they were buoyed by the hope of being rescued, and the outcrop working being fairly well ventilated they were able to secure enough pure air to keep them alive.

The great pumps used to clear the water from the inundated portion were run to their utmost capacity, and dur-ing the night the water receded very When at a point sufficiently low in the morning a raft was hastily constructed in the workings, and on this the rescuing party managed to get through the gangways to a point in the vein, where the coal had a pitch of forty degrees. The raft was turned into the cross heading, and the men were found up above the water sitting on a cross timber or piece of logging, whither they had gone immediately after they discovered the water coming in upon them on Wednesday.

Before they had advanced many steps they were carried along by its force, Being aware of the pitch in the vein they happily selected the only point in the workings where they could have gone in safety and perched themselve on the timbers high above the flood. Their only lamp lasted three hours, and from about 8 o'clock Wednesday they sat on this timber in total darkness, without a morsel to eat, until their

Two of Them Were Crazed.

Two of the men became crazed at times, and with the greatest difficulty their single companion managed to keep them from leaving the cross heading during the long, weary hours that intervened. Their position was beyond all description, and but for the knowl edge that their liberated co apanions in the mines would do everything to reach them, the men would have given up in despair. Intense excitement prevails, and the company is praised on every hand for the exhaustive measures they took to rescue the unfortunate men.

The Nanticoke Disaster. NANTICORE, Pa., Feb. 6 .-- The water which broke down an old working in the Grand Tunnel company and flooded the gangway, carrying a number of workmen along, reached an elevation of 600 feet in the mine. Three of the men, John Riner, William Cragle and Mike Shelarski have not since been heard from, and they are believed to be drowned. It is possible they may have escaped to an old airway off from the point they were working at, and Inside Superintendent Reese and Mine Inspector Williams have hopes of rescuing them alive if the water can be reduced by pumping.

Attacked the Wrong Man. San Francisco, Feb. 10 .- A man entered David King's grocery store, and flashing two pistols, told King to throw up his hands. Instead, King seized a heavy weight and felled the robber to the floor. King then took the pistols and beat the robber over the head with one until he surrendered. King gave his captive up to the police, and it was found that his skull was fractured in several places. The man's condition is critical. The police believe he is the same man who has been making it a specialty to rob grocery stores.
