FREAKS AMID FLAMES.

Chicago's Greatest Fire Since the Memorable Conflagration of '72. CHICAGO, April 13 .- One of the fiercest and most disastrous fires the Chicago department has fought in many years swept through West Madison street yesterday afternoon. The big Smyth building that extends from Union half way to Halsted street, was destroyed, and with it the contents of John M. Smyth & Co.'s furniture house, the largest house of the kind in the world. All that is left of Kohl & Middleton's West Side Dime museum is a heap of bricks and charred timbers. On the north side of Madison street from Union street to the Haymar-ket theatre block five buildings were de-stroyed. Three of them tumbled down before the maelstrom of fire. The total loss is estimated at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. John M. Smythe & Co.

alone will lose nearly $600,000. alone will lose nearly $500,000.

The excitement among the freaks who were on exhibition on the third floor was pitiful to behold. They were practically unable to help themselves, owing to their abnormal development, or lack of development. Clarence Dale, a big headed boy; Zola Lorenzo, the albino; Madame Carver, the fat woman, who were $900 prounds and her son, who is a week prite. pounds, and her son, who is a wee mite of a boy and exhibited as a midget, were on the platform. Mme. Carver hobbled down from the platform, seized the midget, dragged herself to the rear win-dow and was about to throw the child out, when she was restrained. A. D. Lafayette, the father of the big headed boy, who was so top heavy he could not navigate alone, rushed to the assistance of his son, and while leading him out found the albino, almost blind by reason of her weak eyes, groping about in the smoke. With the big headed boy under his arm, he seized the albino and dragged her rather than led her to the stairway and reached the street. All escaped.

Forty persons were precipitated by a falling wall into an excavation. Bernard Sloth had a leg broken and Mrs. Bessie Higgins received injuries which are probably fatal. One boy is missing, and it is feared that he perished.

A Brief Honeymoon.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 14.—Count Reinhold A. Lewenhaupt, died suddenly at his home, No. 1017 Adams street, in this city, shortly after 6 o'clock yester-day morning. His untimely death brings with it the more poignant sorrow, and occasions the greater shock, by reason of his marriage on April 2 to Miss Ellen, youngest daughter of Hon. Thomas F. Bayard. The wedding was celebrated at Delamore Place, the Bayard mansion, and was a quiet and elegant affair. Presented and was a quiet and elegant affair. Preceding and at the time of the wedding, the groom doubtless was suffering from typhoid fever in its incipient stages, but the joyous occasion dispelled all evidences of indisposition.

Governor Fowle's Funeral. RALEIGH, N. C., April 10. — The funeral of Governor Fowle, which took place here at 4:30 yesterday afternoon, brought together thousands of people from many sections of the state. Business was suspended, the public schools and municipal officers were closed, and everywhere mourning emblems were visible. Delegations of leading citizens from almost every city and town in the state, and militia organizations from many places were in attendance, and, with the thousands of citizens, made up an immense procession that followed the remains of the dead governor to his Elizabeth's Big Fire.

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 14.-This place had a narrow escape from a destructive conflagration yesterday morning. Shortly before 11 o'clock fire broke out in the Arcade building in the rooms occupied by L. R. Chew, a picture frame dealer, and by the time the firemen arrived the whole building was a mass of flames. The loss will foot up well on to $500,000. The Arcade building, which was erected in 1866, cost $150,000 and was insured for much less.

Fatally Injured by Exploding Gas. BRADDOCK, Pa., April 8.-Eleven men were seriously injured by an explosion in a row of frame tenements here early yesterday morning. They are all married men and Hungarians who boarded in the row. The names of the injured, so far as known, are: John Pirhacs, Steve Novosk, John Sekerak, Martin Czehnli, Joseph Csjovozi, Frank Zecse, John Mezi and Mike Hamisoviski. The first four will die.

The Italian Embroglio. Washington, April 13.—There is a possibility that the correspondence be-tween Mr. Blaine and Marquis di Rudini will be given out today. It all depends upon the decision of the president. It is understood that, while Mr. Blaine has written a reply to Rudini, it has not been sent, but is still in the hands of the president, who does not seem to be able to make up his mind what to do.

THE CENTRE REPORTER | P. T. BARNUM DEAD.

The Great Showman Breathed His Last with the Waning Day.

UNCONSCIOUS WHEN THE END CAME

There Were No Signs of Failing Mental Qualities, and He Transacted Business But Three Days Before His Death-Some Recollections of a Busy Life.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 8.-P. T. Barnum, the eminent showman, died at 6:30 last night from a general breaking down of the system, due to old age. Mr. Barnum had been ill since November last, and had been confined to his house most of the time, and to his room for the past month.

There were no signs that Mr. Barnum's mental facilities had been affected by his illness. Until within two or three days he attended personally to all his correspondence, and transacted a great deal of business through his private secretary, Mr. Bowser. Sleep-lessness was a feature of his illness. He

PHINEAS TAYLOR BARNUM. had been compelled to resort to the use of soporifics. He declined to use any form of opium, but took sulphonel and chloramid Dr. Godfrey aroused him soon after 8 o'clock yesterday morning and told him that the city had gone Republican in Monday's election, to which Mr. Bar-num replied, "I am glad."

He Died Unconscious. At 10 o'clock he became cyanotic (a condition due to deficient oxidation of the blood), and his respiration and pulse grew weaker. Up to that hour he had remained conscious and at times recognized those about his bedside.

The doctors had promised that when they saw he was beyond hope they would not let him endure unnecessary suffering, and would use sedatives to relieve pain. The first sedative was administered at 11:10, and he fremained unconscious to the end. His married daughters, who had been telegraphed for, arrived yesterday morning, and all his family were present when the end

The wishes of Mr. Barnum will be one but his family will be permitted to look upon his face. The funeral will be unostentatious.

His Early Ventures.

Phineas Taylor Barnum was born in Bethel, Conn., July 5, 1810. His father was a country innkeeper and a merchant in a small way. Phineas, from the age of 13 to 18 years, was in many different branches of business, part of the time in Brooklyn and part in New York city. He gathered tog ther a little money and came back to Betuel and started a little store. He took the agency for a lottery chartered by the state to build the Gro-ton monument. He failed in business in 1824, got married and started a newspaper called The Herald of Freedom. It was not long be-fore he was in jail for litel. In 1834 he brought to New York a colored woman, Joyce Heth, said to be 161 years old and the nurse of George Washington. A post mortem showed she had added eighty years to age.

Tom Thumb and Jenny Lind. But Barnum had got a taste of the show business and never thereafter forsook it. He traveled through the south with one horse circuses which were generally unsuccessful. 1541, without a dollar of his own, he bought out Scudder's museum, renamed it and managed to make it pay. He brought out Charles S. Stratton (Tom Thumb), then less than two feet high and weighing only sixteen pounds. He took the dwarf through the United States and Europe and made money. But it was in 1849, when he brought Jenny Lind over and got her to sing in Castle Garden, that he made a national reputation for himself. He paid her $1,000 a night, and the gross receipts of a tour of ninety-five concerts were $712,161.

He retired from business in 185, and de-voted his attention to booming the town of East Bridgeport, In order to encourage manufacturing company to establish itself there he indorsed their notes for nearly $1,000,000. The company failed and Barnum went into bankruptcy, but he had settled a fortune upon his wife and he started into the

As an Advertiser.

He took charge of his old New York museum once more. It was then at the corner of Broad way and Ann street. While there he aston-ished the vestry of Trinity church by asking permission to stretch an advertising banner from his museum to the steeple of St. Paul's chapel. This was the finest specimen of sub-lime nerve then known to the American nme nerve then known to the American people. On July 13, 1865, the museum burned down, and he got an unlimited quantity of advertising out of it by securing the publication of a most gaudy account of the way the orang outang and the lion and other denizens of the tropical forests took the configration. He rebuilt it, and again it burned.

In 1871 he established a traveling museum and added numerous features, like the hippodrome and elephant races, to the old circus. Never was a traveling show so advertised, and the country boys for weeks pored over his Advance Courier with more interest than that given to any yellow backed novel.

He used to give temperance lectures from the ring and was himself a prominent feature of the street parade.

His Season in London. At the close of the season of 1889 Mr. Barnum transported his entire aggregation to London, at a cost of $350,0.0, and astonished London, at a cost of $350,000, and astonished the natives with a mid winter American circus. His attempt and failure to have his street parade on the day of the lord mayor's show gave him a great deal of gratuitous advertising, and the receipts of his thirteen weeks' season aggregated $000,000.

The Jumbo episqde occurred in 1882. Mr. Barnum's agents arrived in London in February of that year and purchased the great ruary of that year and purchased the great elephant from the Zoological society for

Mr. Barnum was four times a member of the Connecticut legislature and a mayor of Bridgeport. He presented that city with a public park. He also gave a stone museum to Tufts college, near Boston. Among Mr. Baraum's literary achieve-ments were his autobiography, several times rewritten, "Fanny Stories from P. T. Bar-num," "The Humbugs of the World" and "Lion Jack."
