The Realistic Battle Picture at Broad and Cherry Sts., Phila.

The cyclorama of the Battle of Cettysburg at the northeast corner of Broad and Cherry streets has become one of the most attractive features of Philadelphia, Tals stupendous exhibition has to be seen to be appreciated, as no description can do it justice. Standing on the spectator's platform, one seems to have been lifted out of Philadelphia and set among the peaks of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

For miles on every side stretches out the rugged mountain scenery. In the in 50c and $1.00 bottles by all leading fereground are arranged stone walls, old | druggists. trees, cannons and wheels in various stages of wreckage. These are so artistically arranged that the closest scrutiny does not reveal to the eye two alike. where the natural ends and the artificial begins. The various points of the batthe are illustrated in the most natural way. On one side is the historical stone wall facing the famous wheat field where the last stand was made against Pickett's famous onslaught. Here a hand-to-hand fight is taking place so natural that one can almost see the wounded fall under the blow of North Dakota. the uplifted musket but. A little further on is the explosion of the powder in a caisson, sending several artillerymen to instantaneous death and wounding many thers around it. This explosion is pronounced by old soldiers the most realistic piece of work they have ever seen.

Standing at one point of the platform the spectator faces a long road, he deep ruts in the soil which lead right to his feet. Down the road comes a body of artillerymen, with a dash and a sweep that carries everything before it, and makes the visitor to the cyclorama in stinctively step aside to get out of the way of the flying horsemen and avoid being crushed to death. At another point the hospital corps is working energetically in removing the wounded men to an old blacksmi h shop, which is being used as a hospital. Some of the men a:e themselves wounded, but are doing their utmost to aid their comrades, and the wounded men painted are so true as to cause a shudder to run through one.

Taken as a whole the spectacle is grand in every respect, and in no other way can the excitement and horrors of a great battle be thoroughly realized. An hour's view of this wonderful spectacle would be worth a visit to the city 66 if for nothing else.
