THE POET'S CALENDAR .- LONGFELLOW. "All summer afield, all winter indoors," is an old Anglo-Saxon rule and well applies to the Anglo-Americans of our Northern states. The flower-loyers have been "all summer afield" and now we must prepare our gardens for the coming season and our plants and flowers for winter-blooming.

Have garden beds made ready at once for the early Spring bulbs, spad-ing up so that the beds shall be a little higher than toe lawn, thus securing good drainage. See that the soil is well enriched and set the bulbs in September or October, planting from one to six inches apart according to the variety selected, and from one to three inches deep. Cover the beds with pear." coarse straw or leaves, as even with hardy bulbs this mulching will secure more profuse bloom.

The choice of varieties must rest with each person's tastes and means, and the florists are now sending out their fall catalogues giving almost bewildering variety of plants and bulbs with directions for treatment and description of the use of tin cans for this purpose, plant.

Of hardy bulbous plants, the first to bloom is the winter aconite, unfolding its crowded yell w flowers before the snow is gone. Crocuses begin to appear before the frost is fairly gone. Their bloom is ephemeral and they close in the shade so that they are not very desirable as cut flowers, but they come so early and bloom so brightly on the lawn that one can scarcely afford to be without them. Florists furnish these bulbs at the low plunge them in the ground. Let the hole in the bottom of the pot stand on a bit of stone or board, to prevent the roots growing through, or worms get-ting into the pots. Keep the shoots pinched in. If they are wanted to blossom before December, push them with manure water not too strong. If wanted in good condition for Christmas or New Year they should be kept back and repotted the last of September, and plunged again, remaining out until there is danger of freezing, when they should be brought into the house and given plenty of air and light. A tablespoonful of guano in a gallon of water, to which is added a few drops of ammonia, applied moderately will be of service in hastening growth. Be careful not to use too large pots. Geranums blossom best when root bound, that is, when the pots are so full of roots as to make a complete mass of them between the soil and the pot. The vanunculus may be cultured with tolerable success in the garden if good drainage be provided and are easily cultivated in the house. They require shade and moisture.

H. paniculata grandiflora has immense white panicles of flowers of a pyramidal form and flowers in August and September. It is said to be en-tirely hardy. There are also red-branched varieties and one or two with ornamental leaves. The less hardy sorts should be grown in boxes, wintering in the cellar and placed in shady places in the garden during the summer.

FOTTING GERANIUMS FOR WINTER.

An exchange gives some valuable hints on the potting of geraniums for winter blooming:

"There are frequent complaints from ladies who do not succeed satisfactorily in their window gardening so far as the blooming of geraniums is concerned. In most cases the fault is that flowers are expected either from plants that bloomed in the summer or that were started too late in the season. If plants bitter-tasting matter or what he has are repotted in the fall they are checked caten or drunk-August Flower in their growth, and although the buds | the Remedy. already set may open, new ones will not be formed until the plant has had a resting time. If new plants are started the gradual decay of vital power; in mid-summer and repetted early they he feels miserable, melancholy, will not attain sufficient strength to bloom until late in winter.

If good blooming plants in winter are wanted, small plants should be planted early in the season, in this latitude about the middle of May, in an open sunny place, giving them plenty of room. But while the heart, the lungs and the stomach in an ordinary constituted person can endure a pretty severe abuse without stopping in their work, the liver is a very sensitive organ. The least interruption in its activity is noticed at once in a most disagreeable manner. Serious com-plications may arise therefrom, for which the physicians have invented a large number of long Latin names, and which, if not attended to promptly, are followed by long and painfal diseases and frequently by death. Ordinary people usually class all these discases under the general name of liver complaint. Toeir symptoms can be easily recognized. A yellow color of the skin, particularly of the white of the eye, a disagreeably bitter billous taste in the mouth, a thickly-coated tongue, loss of appetite, a dislike for meats, combined with headtite, a dislike for meats, combined with head-ache, light attacks of fever, etc., these are un-failing signs that the liver is out of order. As soon as one or more of these symptoms appear it is necessary, in order to prevent a serious sickness, to remove from the liver all super-fluous bile and all waste matter, to promote the free circulation of the blood, and to gently stimulate the capricious appetite. There is no better remedy to accomplish this purpose than St. Beroard Vegetable Fills, which have been justly celebrated for a long time. They are prepared exclusively from the best medicinal herbs of the Alps, whose healing ingredients are made up by competent pressons in the form of pills without the the admixture of any min-eral substances.
