"My fittle, dewy, moss-grown vase
Forth from its turret looks and sees.
Wide stretched around the park and chase
The dappied deer beneath the trees.
Beside the river bask the kine.
The sheep go browsing o'er the sward;
And kine, and sheep, and deer are mine
Tho' all the park calls Dudley Lord."

So sing a poet and the loving thought of the song is echoed in all sweltering through the Summer, the flower-pots only can bring back fond memories of youth and freedom, singing voices and happy hearts.

Some litt e. geutle flower, "mignonette or duffodil, scented rose or prized geranium," lifts up the thoughts of busy workers and cheers them at their toils, bringing, perhaps to them more pleasure than the well-filled conservatory of the millionaire, to people sated with luxury.

Even in the country, Winter must come and the garden tells be bare of bloom. Then, in farmer's kitchens, in pretty sitting-rooms, in well-filled green-houses, bright flowers lift their cheery faces and compensate us for all the care and trouble bestowed upon

As for the po' itself, one's own taste and means must be consilted. Empty tin cons properly perforated, and nextby pa nted will give as good results in growing plants as the most costly jardintere and a home-made window-lox lined with zinc can be made a "thing of beauty," when filled with blossom-ing plants. The florists ofter, however, at reas nable prices elegant "Minton" jars, very handsome and unique; terracotta pots and hanging baskets; "bee-hive" and "hedgehog" crocks for cro-cus and haly of the valley;" tree tubs, lily bowls and hyacinth glasses, all pleasing and convenient for their various uses which those who can afford them will find to be a saving of much time and labor.

After all it is not the outside which attracts us, but the blithe faces, sweet perfume, or handsome foliage of the plant itself

For a small collection of about twenty plants, we would advise half a dezen tea roses of different colors, selected or treated so as to secure succession of bloom; one or more of he Chinese narcissus planted in a glass bowl with pretty peobles to secure the buibs; hyacintus, of course, and a gersnium or two: a foli ge plant, farfug-imm grande, c leus or a feathery palm; there should be a hanging-basket or two and a choice of one's especial favorites with some novely to study for the pleasure of watching some new flower develop.

it does not require much more time pleasure to its owner.

A small raisin box filled with pansies gives great delight to the children of a their magnificent flowers are a pleasing study. Indee! one can hardly choose any one of the multitudes which make up the flower-world without finding it to be a source of great satisfaction and comfort.

A PLEA FOR BETTER TASTE. A writer in "Success with Flowers" makes an appeal to that magazine to suggest prettier "out-door fixings" for our homes. This is a field we may all enter and a fruitful one it is.

The writer in question whose artistic taste has been shocked writes: I know of one house, and the design is very pretty, that has this abominable arrangement. The front porch is painted light blue. In it are two beer kegs, one on top of the other, both The Great Liver and Stomach Remedy. painted black with yellow stripes. In painted black with yellow stripes. In the top one is planted a miserable looking Cactus; the whole effect is so queer that one stops, not to admire, but laugh. Now if the beer kegs, provided they must use them, had not been painted, but Nasturtiums had been painted, but Nasturtiums had been allowed to cover the sides, it would have been quite pretty, especially if strings had been tied up to the sides of the porch, and a Bullnose vine trained on them. Another lady has a row of large flower pots on her front piazza painted scarlet. We say on pa sing not, "What pretty plants!" but "See those red flower pots!" In a front yard I saw the lower part of a large tree trunk; it was turned bottom side up the larger part was in the air, and a few plants in it. An old stump, looking as if it had once been a tree in that very place, but cut down and vines drooping over, is a very picturesquelooking thing. But there was nothing like the specimen I saw in heaven above, or earth beneath. What is there more beautiful for the breakfast table than charming Glories? And they grow so easily! Three mohes between sidewalk and the house is enough, and trained over the dining room windows. What can be prettier? We can do a great deal more to beautify our homes, even if we live in crowded streets. We can learn something from the Chinese.

Headache is the disorder most complained of John -- What's the matter with ye, old now-a-days, and against which the greater number of the so-called home remedies are approximately Old lives - That is just the matter. I pied. In most cases, however, they are not the proper remedies, because most people are ignorant of the true character of the numerous causes of the charder. And yet it is a very simple matter indeed. In nine cases out of ten hadache is produced by a disard red stomach and consequent imp riect circulation of the bood which causes a congestion in the head. The physicians therefore call it gastric headache, while it is more commonly known as sick headache. It appears in different forms, sometimes it occurs as a dull pain in the forehead, again as a sharp acute pain, then again as a feeling of general of pression, and finally a violent throbbing of the arteries against the temples. In most of these cases coid feet and general languor are added to the other symptions. The last mentioned symptoms particularly are an infallible guide to the cause. No sickness, no indisposition can be thoroughly cured unless the treatment be directed towards eradicating the root of the evil. In this case the disordered or overloaded stomach and liver, which are the source of the headache, must be regulated and put into a sound condition. For this purpose there is no more effective remedy and none that is better adapted to promote the general health than the St. Bernard Vegetable Pills, so-called after the noble order of Benedictines, whose members have rendered such great services to the science of medicine particularly in the use of her balps. They act as a mid laxative, a neutralising alternat and a blood purifier, promoting a healthy circulation.
