Entertaining an Author.

Forty years ago every town in New England had its lyceum, and, as one of the winter's recreations, a course of lectures delivered by clergymen, politicians and men distinguished in literature. Hospitality was freely extended to the lecturer, and not infrequently, if he was a notable man, several families invited him to become their guest.

The late Richard H. Dana, Jr., the author of "Two Years Before the Mast," used to tell a story illustrative | That is, if you go about it in the of the effort made by hosts to entertain their distinguished guests.

Mr. Dana once lectured in a country town and then walked home with the president of the lyceum, a farmer. After a long silence, the farmer said,-"Mr. Dana, I believe you wrote a book once?" "Yes."

"Waal, I never read it myself; my folks have, though."

Dead silence again fell upon the two until their arrival at the farmer's house where Mr. Dana was introduced to the invalid wife, who had not been to the lecture.

"My dear," said the farmer, "I believe you've read Mr. Dana's 'look?" The wife stared, then recovered herself, and answered,-"I b'lieve I've heard speak of it." Apples were brought in, and with them eame the the farmer's daughter, a little black-eyed, sharp-looking school-"Susan 'Liza," said the farmer, "you've read Mr. Dana's 'Two Years

Before the Mast," haven't you?" "No, sir," replied Susan 'Liza. There was dead silence till bedtime.

Table Etiquette for Children.

Here are a few good old rules that can be very safely followed: Give a child a seat that shall be strictly its own. Teach it to take its seat quietly.

To use its napkin properly.

To wait patiently to be served.

To answer promptly.

To say thank you.

If asked to leave the table for a forgotten article or for any purpose to do so at once.

Never to interrupt and never to con-

Never to make remarks about the food, such as "I saw that turkey killed, and how he did bleed," as I once heard a little boy remark at a Thanksgiving dinner.

Teach the child to keep his plate in order.

Not to handle bread or to drop it on the cloth and floor.

To always say, "Excuse me, please," to the mother when at home, and to the lady or hostess when visiting, if Apply Balm into each nostrill ELY BEOS. 56 Warren St leaving the table before the rest of the party.

To fold its napkin and to put back its chair or push it close to the table before leaving. And after leaving the table not to

I know children who observe every one of these rules, and are in no way priggish, but are simply well-behaved, delightful companions, and they owe it all to their mother's careful training from babyhood.

The liver, the kidneys, the heart, the lungs and the stomach are the most important organs necessary for the preservation of life. It is therefore the duty of every one who cares at all for his bodily health to keep them in as good condition as possible. But while the heart, the lungs and the stomach in an ordinary constituted person can endure a pretty severe abuse without stopping in their work, the liver is a very sensitive organ. The least interruption in its activity is noticed at once in most disagreeable manner.
