HYMNIAL.

Mr. Charles W. Slack and Miss Maggie L. Boal United in Marriage.

About four miles west of Centre Hall, on the evening of the 19th of November, 1891, at the home of Capt. G. M. Boal, who is one of Centre county's most progressive and intelligent citizens, a most delightful event transpired. It was the giving away of his daughter Maggie L. in marriage to Charles W. Slack, of Pottery Mills. The officiating minister was Rev. Baskerville, and the ceremony was performed in the spacious parlor where all had a good opportunity of witnessing the tying of the knot. Twenty minutes before the time appointed for the ceremony to take place, the guests were all assembled—about seventy-five in number— anxiously awaiting the appearance of the bridal party. As the clock struck seven, strains of music were heard from an adjoining room, and at the close of a beautiful and appropriate wedding march, rendered by Miss Jennie Boal, the bride and groom entered the room preceded by the bridesmaid and groomsmen, Miss Lizzie Boal and Mr. Porter Odenkirk. The bride and bridesmaid looked charming, being dressed in cream cashmere, trimmed in ribbon and lace, and both carried a bouquet of beautiful white flowers. Immediately after the ceremony congratulations were received, after which the guests were all comfortably seated and preparations were made for a rich repast which was in waiting. As all were heartily partaking of the refreshments with which they were so bountifully supplied, they were startled by music such as only calisthumpians can render. Capt. Boal's family are noted for their hospitality, and judging that the boys' appetites would be sharpened by the effort put forth to render music out of the instruments they had manufactured for the occasion, the Capt. kindly invited them in and they were served royally.

The bride and groom left for Bellefonte at 9 o'clock, where they remained overnight and took the morning train Friday, for Tyrone, where the honeymoon will be spent.

Among the guests from a distance were Mrs. Elizabeth Barber, of Milton, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Crawford and daughter Margaret, of Cooperstown, Venango county, Commissioner James Strohm and wife and Miss Mary McQuiston and brother, of Bellefonte.

The presents were numerous, valuable and useful. Mr. Slack is a fine young man and has wisely chosen an accomplished and intelligent young lady as a companion and help-meet through life. The happy pair have the best wishes of their many friends for health, happiness and prosperity throughout life.

Bearick, of the Lutheran church, of which she was a life-long member officiating.

A New Industry For the Town.

The knitting factory building at Millheim, which has been untenanted for several years, we have been informed by a reliable party, has been rented to a party in Howard for the purpose of manufacturing handles, and is expected will give employment to a number of men. The knitting factory was the source of much loss to the business men of Millheim who invested their money in it and never received any returns. The people were gulled by a couple of scamps named Crawford.

Killed at Pardee

John A. Goodlander, employed on a lumber job at Pardee, was instantly killed several days ago by the wrecking of several cars on a tram road. He had not been in the best of health for over a year, but not of so serious a nature as to necessarily confine him to his bed for any length of time, and was able to attend to his business affairs. On last Monday, 23rd inst., he was taken quite ill again and gradually growing weaker, death ended his sufferings on Monday of this week from hemorrhages, medical assistance being of no avail. He was conscious until the last and his death was peaceful.

Deceased was the son of George Harper, dec'd, and Elizabeth Harper, who still survives him, and resides with her son Simon in Centre Hall, and was born in the vicinity of Rebersburg, afterwards removing to Bellefonte where he engaged in the mercantile business, which he followed until his death, being the senior member of the firm of J. It is the purpose of Executive Commissioner Witman, of the Board of the World's Fair managers to enlist the ladies of the State to prepare something for the State Exhibition at the World's Fair. The naming of the ladies has been left to the members of the board in the several counties which have immediate representatives thereon.

This county will be represented by the following ladies: Mrs. Henrietta Foster, Philipsburg; Mrs. L. H. Barnard, State College; Mrs. Cameron Burnside, Howard; Mrs. W. K. Alexander, Millheim; Mrs. Witmer Wolf, Centre Hall; Miss Alice Wilson, Miss Mary Brockerhoff, Mrs. W. F. Reeder, Mrs. Gertrude Weber, Bellefonte.

Literary Note.

The theory that fiction dealing exclusively with refined and poetical love is best written by women will be proved true if other women can write such ardent and tropical rhapsodies as Mrs. Amelia E. Barr's latest work, "Love for an Hour is Love Forever." It may however, be justly doubted whether any other woman can produce so exquisitely tender, so warm and so charming a love story as this, Mrs. Barr's favorite and masterpiece. This much of the theory is certainly true: that no male author can with Mrs. Barr in the portrayal of idyllic love. "Love for an Hour is Love Forever" will begin in the New York Ledger of November 21.

Preacher Dill Responsible.

Mrs. Fannie Dill, of Lewisburg, widow of Reese Dill, deceased, has removed to Washington, D. C., to open a boarding house. Mrs. Catharine Dill, widow of A. H. Dill, is clerking for John Wanamaker, Philadelphia. Both ladies lost their ill through the failure of Rev. W. H. Dill, of Clearfield.

THE ROBBER CAPTURED.

A Daring Bank Robbery Committed last May, in Lewisburg.

A daring bank robbery was committed in Lewisburg last May and is now first made public known by the capture of the robber. Captain Linden, of the Pinkerton detectives brought Joe Killorain to Lewisburg one day the latter part of last week and lodged him in the Union county jail.

Killorain is charged with having robbed the Lewisburg National Bank in May. The amount is given as $16,000, but many think it will reach $30,000. The bank authorities have kept the matter a secret all this time in order to avoid depositors from drawing out their money. The bank is in good condition and the depositors will lose nothing. Killorain is a professional in the bank robbing business, and has escaped from every place of confinement.

The bank building at Lewisburg is an old fashioned affair and the desk of the paying teller is located right under a window that looks out on the main road. The robbery was committed at noon, there being no one but the teller in the bank at the time. He was sitting at his desk when a man drove up in a buggy and stopped at the window. Shaking two yellow envelopes he held in his hand he asked the teller to step out. After some parleying the teller left his desk and walked out to the carriage. The stranger held him in conversation for some minutes. Then the stranger drove away. Two hours later it was discovered that several thousand dollars were missing from the vault. The case was at once placed in the hands of a Pinkerton agent. A picture of Killorain was shown to the teller, and he identified it as the photograph of the man who had been lurking about the bank. Ever since then the detectives have been looking for their man.

On Thursday word reached them that he had returned to New York, where his wife lived. An agent proceeded to the house and captured the man just as he was preparing to leave.

Running a Newspaper.

To run a newspaper without occasionally publishing an item that is untrue, or gives offense, is like running a railroad without having smash-ups and accidents. It can't be done, truthfully remarks an exchange. No man in the world is so likely to be imposed upon as the editor of a newspaper. Pushed with work constantly—day and night—he must rely in a great measure upon second or third parties for information as to the events that transpire during the week. Frequently statements are received from good reliable people, but which are subsequently discovered, after having gone through many mouths, to be without foundation in fact. If therefore, kind reader, you find your self aggrieved by a statement in your home paper, keep this fact in mind. Don't "fly off the handle," but go to the editor and ask for a correction, and take our word for it, in nine cases out of ten, if your case is just, you will be received like a gentleman and the correction made with pleasure.

A Good Reason For it.

Many people who have gone to Philadelphia have noticed that the train stops a short distance outside the Broad Street station and then runs on into the depot. Few persons know what the stop is made for. There is a very good reason for it and every engineer has orders to make the stop. It is done to try the air brakes to see if they are working all right. The brakes sometimes get out of order and the trains run on past the place of stopping. If this should happen when the trains run into the station it would go on through the waiting rooms and drop down into Broad Street. The precaution is a good one, but many persons often grumble at the stop, when it is possibly saving their lives.

Fierce Storm.

One of the fiercest rain storms that we ever had, visited this section last Monday afternoon. Sunday night rain set in; Monday up to noon was warm and showery. In the afternoon a hurricane set in, the sky was dark with rain clouds and the water came down in torrents intermixed with hail; sharp lightning and heavy thunder accompanied the storm. Many fences and trees were blown down. The storm raged nearly three-fourth of an hour. Cold winds have prevailed since.

They Won't Die in the House.

To banish rats says an exchange, take cayenne pepper ground to a fine powder and sprinkle plenty of it in their holes and runways. It is an excellent article for keeping rats out of a place after you have once got them out. It operates by creating as violent disturbance in their breathing apparatus. Don't be afraid of putting too much in their holes. Apply it liberally and remember it must be ground exceedingly fine and be very dry to produce the best results.

Quite Romantic.

James Sleeman and Annie Culbertson were two young people of Huntingdon engaged to be married. This was something over a year ago. The day for the wedding was agreed upon and the necessary preparations made, but the groom failed to show up. The bride was at a loss to know why her intended did not come to time, so the wedding could proceed, but she failed to receive any information. The wedding was necessarily postponed for the time being, but upon a second attempt the marriage was consummated last week. The groom gives the following to the Monitor as explanatory why he was not on hand the first time: He says that while working in Braddock, and about two weeks before the wedding day, he received a letter signed "W. W. Culbertson"—that is the name of the girl's father—which forbid him entering the author's house, and declaring that the marriage would never occur. Sleeman always believed that the father was not kindly disposed to ward him and it was natural that he should accept the letter as coming from the girl's parent, and also heed the warning. He felt that the iron hand of fate was against him and he then began a wandering career. After a journey to the State of Washington and thence along the Pacific coast and through the South-western Territories to Texas, he finally landed in St. Louis, Mo. There he chanced to pick up a newspaper and was almost dumbfounded in reading an account of his faithless actions toward an innocent girl, wherein all blame was credited to him. Nearly four months had then elapsed but he hastily made his way East and upon his arrival here learned that the communication signed by the girl's father had been an anonymous one.
