Notes from the Excursionists.

Californians have pronunciations for some of their towns, and places that strike an eastern man as singular. San Jose they pronounce San Hoza; Mojave they call Mohave, a very broad.

Stockton is the principal manufacturing city in California. It has large implement manufactories, and other important industries.

A harvester is built there, large in size, which cuts, threshes, cleans and sacks the grain while in operation in the field, all at the same time.

Ogden and Denver, in Salt Lake valley are fine cities, only Denver's streets and pavements were disgustingly muddy—they had a rainy spell there.

At Portland, much to the pleasure of the editorial party, we found Uncle Sam's big war ships, the Baltimore and Charleston in the harbor.

During our first days outing on steamer, around San Francisco harbor, we were accompanied by the governor of California and Mr. Childs, and I had the pleasure of a conversation with these gentlemen for over half an hour.

In California meat, fish, and other food can be dried in the open air without spoiling or becoming tainted with smell, so pure is the atmosphere.

My notes were nearly all written hurriedly on my knee on board the moving cars, and mailed without revision or correction, hence may have been disconnected at times, yet I trust were sufficiently clear to give the reader an idea of my observations, dotted down in the briefest possible manner, not telling half and exaggerating nothing.

California, it is safe to say, is the most wonderful land on the globe, and one-half the truth is sufficient to make many doubt that the things said can be true of that state.

To sum up, give me good old Pennsylvania, with its mountains and valleys, and if there is any spot I would prefer it is California, and if any of our readers desires to leave the old Keystone state, don't stop this side of California, and it will never be regretted—you can't fail to get rich there.

SUMMER TOURS.

The Latest Publication of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The 1st of June is a date looked forward to by the thousands who make their preliminary plans for summer outings and their main guide is the Summer Excursion book issued yearly by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

It is not only a compendium of all the rates prevailing over its own and connecting lines to the principal resorts of the land, but it is equally as valuable as a guide-book, with full and explicit information as to how trips may be made, and as to what desirable variations may be utilized to enhance their pleasure and profit.

In arranging these routes care has been observed in making them read over lines that present the greatest number of interesting points, and in every case there is a wide field for choice.

It is so comprehensive that one could hardly ask for a ticket to an Eastern resort of any prominence and fail to find it ready-made by a variety of routes. One hundred and thirty railroad and steamboat lines are represented in the coupons of these tickets every one of them connecting directly or remotely with the Pennsylvania system.
