CENTRE HALL, PA., THURS. JAN. 17.

EX-PRESIDENT HAYES DEAD

Ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes died at 11 o'clock Tuesday night. Early in the evening an inquiry elicited the response that the general had passed a fairly well day and was resting nicely. The change from better to worse was rapid and at 11 o'clock the distinguished ex-president passed away.

Ex-President Hayes passed quietly away, at his pleasant home, Spiegel Grove, a short distance from Fremont. He was surrounded by his family. Although over seventy years old, he was the picture of ruddy health until suddenly stricken down Tuesday by neuralgia of the heart. He had suffered from the disease for many years, and when the death of Mrs. Hayes was announced to him two years ago he was overcome by a severe attack and revived with great difficulty.

CARLISLE will be Cleveland's secretary of the treasury.

IN WEST LIBERTY, O., the white people have ordered the negroes to leave the town, and have tarred and feathered one of them. This is in Ohio, not Georgia nor Alabama, nor any Southern State.

THE 12 PRESIDENTS BEFORE WASH-INGTON.

A correspondent inquires of the New York World: "Who were the twelve Presidents before Washington? How could there be any Presidents before Washington?" To which the World answers that the United States came into official existance as a nation Nov. 15, 1777, by the adoption of a constitution—the first Constitution known generally as the "Articles of Confederation and perpetual union," but to suppose that the United States had no existence between 1777 and 1779, or that the American constitutional history dates from the adoption of its last constitution rather than from its first, is an error. The preconstitution differs but very little from the first constitution. There is no power conferred in the one that was not in the other, but the manner of executing the power is changed. Under the first constitution, for example, the Supreme Court existed as it exists now, but it was formed from a committee of Congress. The President was there, but he was "President of the United States in Congress Assembled." The cabinet (of thirteen members) was there, one from each State and the majority governed. The second constitution took the powers which Congress had and divided them up, making certain people responsible for them. The Presidents before Washington had been merely puppets; they presided; they did not execute. Their names were: Henry Laurens, 1777; John Jay, 1778; Samuel Huntington, 1779; Thos. McKean, 1780; John Hanson, 1781; Elias Boudinot, 1782; Thomas Mifflin, 1783; Richard Henry Lee, 1784; Nathaniel Gorham, 1786; Arthur St. Clair, 1787; Cyrus Griffin, 1788. They were each chosen for one year, and not eligible for re-election the following year."

DON'T TRY FOR A GOVERNMENT CLERKSHIP.

To all young men who contemplate a journey to Washington for the purpose of securing employment the best advice is, don't. The humblest situation in a mercantile house, where the pecuniary reward is small, where the hours are long and the labor is hard, is better in the end than a government clerkship. One way lie opportunities of advancement, for the utiliman possesses. The other way lie hopelessness, drudgery, stagnation.

Many a poor young man seeks a government clerkship in order that he may earn his support while he is studying his profession. He is taking up a staff that is likely to become necessary to him as a crutch. He is in danger of discovering, when his profession is learned, that he has not the moral courage to drop his government stipend. It would have been infinitely better-it might have been his making-if he had toiled for scantier dollars in a manlier way.

The government clerk drags out a monotonous existence, dreary, unpromising of advancement, and if he is not turned out in his old age to linger on through his few remaining years in poverty, he is one of the most fortunate of his kind. There is no service that so destroys the latent energies and kills the hope men who think they have the ele- day and didn't fail to give us a call. ment of success in them should avoid it as they would the plague.

Higby is fully decided. Although Andrews is on the roll he has not attempted to vote on any question. The leading Democratic members of the House have resolved to enter their protest if Andrews should answer to his name, when a lively discussion will likely follow. Representative Wherry is of the fixed opinion that the action of the House in amending the journal recognizing the returns electing Higby enrols that member, and that the action of Chief Clerk Voorhees gives the House one more member than the law allows that body. The crisis may come Wednesday afternoon, when Andrews will doubtless attempt to vote for Quay.
