A NEW LICENSE BILL.

A new license bill will be introduced in the state senate.

The bill in question providing for the creation of "The License Court of Pennsylvania." The court is to consist of ten judges in every way equal to the present common pleas judges of the state. They are to be appointed by the governor, half of them being Democrats and half Republicans. Their term is to be ten years and their salary $5,000 per annum. Their terms will be made to expire so that a new one will be appointed every two years. form and fine stock. The state is divided into twenty-four license districts. Licenses are to be go into effect three months later in each case their number is to be chosen president. | in. A judge is there designated to go to each of the districts to be looked after first. Each judge so assigned proceeds to the district and devotes the first two months to visiting all the places seeking to be licensed, informing himself fully upon everything connected with the place and the applicant. In the next month he sits to consider the had six appointments, included in application.
