

REV. DR. PALMAGE.

The eminent Brooklyn Divine's Sunday Sermon.

Subject: "A Brooklyn Pastorate."

Text: "And round about the throne were four and twenty seats..."

This text I choose chiefly for the numerals it mentions—namely, four and twenty.

No city under the sun where people take such good care of their ministers.

I remark again, a Brooklyn pastorate is characterized by its happiness.

with holy speed did in a short time work which it takes a great many years to do.

Whether for good or bad reasons a Brooklyn pastorate is characterized by brevity.

the gospel. You are not afraid of me, and I am not afraid of you, and some day, O brother, will clasp your hands together.

Profiting by the mistakes of the past, I must do better work for you and better work for God.

The world has given me about all the comfort I can get.

And then the dear children. Oh, how many have gone out of this church!

Oh, if we could see the dear children, your arms and said: "O God, I cannot give them up!"

And then the dear children. Oh, how many have gone out of this church!

Too Much Money. A leading paper in a New England State, discussing corrupt election practices, strikes at the root of the trouble when it says:

"The fact is, both parties have too much money."

What is admitted of that State is unfortunately true of many others; namely, that 'shameful or rather shameless, use of money has come to be a part of every general election.'

The same writer adds puts the suggestive question: "If votes are worth $30 each, provided a man has no character; if work is scarce, crops poor, and children plenty, and hungry, what is going to become of his character?"

The story is told that at a recent election one of the parties polled in a certain town a much larger vote than usual.

We are proud that the United States has had no such gigantic scandal as that now convulsing France; let us take care that 'too much money' in politics does not lead us in that direction.
