SPEEDY ACTION WANTED.

The business and industrial sentiment of the country demands prompt action on the tariff bill when it shall have been reported to congress, says of that given for Pattison. the Pittsburg Post. This on the theory that, tariff revision having been determined on, the sooner it is done and no doubt of that. While we have never taken any stock in a tariff scare, er before experienced, under the benign such as the Republicans engineered in the late canvass, yet there can be no doubt that impending changes in the rates of duties, whether up or down, induce a conservatism in all operations. Manufacturers go slow until they ascertain exactly what the duties on the raw materials they use or the products of their mills will be. This was the case during the long time the tariff of 1893 was pending in commission and congress, and when the Mc-Kinley law was up. It does not involve disaster to business, but only a cautious policy for the time being.

Some of the Republican papers are urging that their party in the senate shall fight the new tariff bill at every step and by every means of delay known to the rules of that body. That is a question the Republicans will have to determine for themselves. If they think it will advantage their party to devote weeks and months to dilatory speeches, as in the case of the Sherman repeal bill, they will of course do so. Such a system of delay will hardly be found a paying investment politically with the whole country calling for prompt action, as in the case of the Sherman repeal. The Democrats got their punishment as being the chief sinners in that respect.

The political interests of the Democrats demand that the new tariff bill should go into operation as quickly as possible. It cannot be put in force a day too soon for us. The experiment of the Republicans with the McKinley bill will not be lost upon the Democrats. That bill was approved by the President October 1, 1890, and by its terms took effect, when not otherwise specially provided, on October 6. That was just a month before the congressional elections, at which the Republi- lake, living a few miles above this cans met a most disastrous overthrow. The bill was so bad that it would no doubt have led to Republican defeat in on the sick list for a long time and any event, but politicians are general- had always complained of something ly agreed that it was a stupendous moving in his stomach, causing him blunder to make it to take effect in so burning sensations and great weakshort a time before an important election. That was all that was asked in the name of protection. To carry out the Republican platform the duty on steel rails should be reduced from $13 44 a ton to $3 78.
