FARMERS AND INCOME TAX.

As to the proposed income tax," Judge Holman, of Indiana, the "watchdog of the treasury," presents Indiana, a few nights ago, there was the cogent argument that the a bloody deed, in which John Foster expenses of the government are now so large it does not seem to be possible killed his wife and their three children to raise the necessary revenues by ordinary means and without imposing a tax on incomes, says the Pittsburg trouble with his wife and several years Post. This he supplements with the statement that the demand for the extravagant legislation of the last few years has come largely from men of affluence, who have large interests to subserve and want to see the government do things on an expensive scale. If they have to pay some of the expenses of an extravagant government in the shape of an income tax, it is Judge Holman's opinion that they may learn needed lessons of public economy.

There is a great deal of truth in this. Nothing enforces economy more than a direct levy of taxes to meet the expenditures. Indirect taxes sugar-coat the medicine. Judge Holman opposes an increase in the tax on tobacco and beer, as they are the poor man's luxuries. As to an income tax, it is the opinion of Judge Holman that it should include government and other salaries and incomes of $3,000 per annum and over. Asked if such a tax would catch the farmers of Ohio and Indiana, the Judge said he thought not, as there are not many agriculturists who have a net income of anything like $4,000 a year.
