THE TARIFF ISSUE SETTLED.

Says the Philadelphia Times: The Wilson bill, as amended in the senate, has passed both houses of congress, of an immediate and rapid revival of business and industry.

The enemies of tariff reform overreached themselves at the last. They were determined from the beginning to prevent any revision of the tariff if possible and to preserve the iniquitous McKinley act in force. They tried to do this indirectly. They permitted the new bill to pass the senate with such changes as they felt sure the house would not approve, trusting to defeat the measure at the last on the report of the committee of conference.

The decided attitude of the house compelled them to show their hands, and it was made evident by the senate conferees themselves that any tariff bill that must be again submitted to a vote in the senate would be defeated there. The friends of tariff reform promptly grasped the situation when it was thus clearly presented, and in obedience to the almost unanimous determination of the Democratic caucus the house yesterday re-called the bill these subjects may be dismissed. from conference and passed it precisely as it came from the senate, thus completing the long deferred tariff leg- the coming session of this Congress. largely diminished active business, has islation and baffling the enemies of reform at their own game. At the same time that this decision was reached it was also determined to introduce and pass immediately separate supplementary acts putting sugar, coal, iron ore and barbed wire upon the free list. This is done to define and emphasize the record of the house, and with no expectation that these bills will be concurred in by the senate. Free sugar is a theoretical rather than a practical measure, since the revenue from this article is absolutely essential, and the tariff bill as passed turns into the treasury the greater part of the profits which the sugar trust has levied under the McKinley act without giving any return. Free coal and iron ore are more desirable, since the present tax yields practically no revenue, iff, will greatly benefit their business, but the same influences which restored the duty on these articles in the new tariff will prevent the senate's concurrence in their removal by special act. The passage of these bills, however, will keep the party record straight, and force the responsibility for the defects of the new tariff upon the McKinleyite senators who have kept the business of the country tied 1900.
