find that if retaliation is to be the game the United States holds the winning hand. The annual report of Gen. Casey, Chief of Engineers, U. S. A., just made public, again brings forward the recommendation that a separate building be provided by Congress to be used for office purposes by the President. The necessity for such a building is so apparent that the only wonder is that it has not long ago been erected. The President is the only official of the Government who is expected to reside in the same building in which he transacts his official business. The idea is so repugnant to President Cleveland that during his first as well as his present administration he has owned a residence in order that he and his family might get the privacy that cannot be had at the White House. At this writing they are residing in his own house on the outskirts of Washington, the President driving to the White House every day to transact his official business.
