When It Rains It Pours.

The Hadramut Valley, in South Arabia, though well known in ancient times, is hardly ever visited nowadays, as the natives are a lawless set and very unfriendly towards strangers. They have a curious method of cultivating the land. The upper surface of much of the soil is sand, which is scraped off by long wooden boxes fastened to camels. Of the sand thus collected dykes are made around the district that is to be cultivated. Next the soil is lightly ploughed, and then the farmer awaits for rain. Sometimes rain falls only once in three years, but when it comes it pours in torrents, and the water is held up by the dykes. The crop then is so abundant that even if the gain fell only every third year, enough grain is grown to last the people during the interval of drought.

Subject: "Business Troubles."

Text: "These were thy merchants in all sorts of things."—Ezekiel xxvii., 24.

We are at the opening door of returning National prosperity. The coming crops, the re-establishment of public confidence and, above all, the blessing of God will turn in upon all sections of America the widest, greatest prosperity this country has ever seen. But that door of success is not yet fully open, and thousands of business men are vet suffering from the distressing times through which we have been passing.

Some of the best men in the land have faltered, men whose hearts are enlisted in pathies and plead before heaven with availing prayer. The schools such men have established, the churches they have built, the asylums and beneficent institutions they have fostered will be their eulogy long after their banking institutions are forgotten. Such men can never fail. They have their treasures in banks that never break and will

In the first place, I have to remark that a great many of our business men feel ruinous everywhere understood that it now takes three or four times as much to do business well than it once did. Once a few hundred dollars were turned into goods. The merchant would be his own storekeener his own chant would be his own storekeeper, his own salesman, his own bookkeeper, He would manage all the affairs himself, and everything would be net profit. Wonderful changes have come. Costly apparatus, extensive advertising, exorbitant store rents, heavy taxation, expensive agencies are only heavy taxation, expensive agencies are only parts of the demand made upon our commercial men, and when they have found themselves in such circumstances with small capital they have sometimes been tempted to run against the rocks of moral and financial destruction. This temptation of limited capital has ruined men in two ways. Someimes they have shrunk down under the emptation. They have yielded the battle temptation. knocked together at the fall of the auction-eer's hammer. They blanched at the finan-cial peril. They did not understand that there is such a thing as heroism in merchandise and that there are Waterloos counter and that a man can fight no braver battle with the sword than he can with the yardstick. Their souls melted in them because sugars were up when they wanted to buy and down when they wanted to sell, and unsalable goods were on the shelf and bad debts in their ledger. The gloom of their countenances overshadowed even their their countenances overshadowed even their dry goods and groceries. Despondency, coming from limited capital, blasted them. Others have felt it in a different way. They have said: "Here I have been trudging along. I have been trying to be honest all these years. I find it is of no use. Now it is make or break." The small craft that could have stood the stream is put out beyoud the lighthouse on the great sea of speculation. He borrows a few thousand dollars from friends who dare not refuse him, and he goes bartering on a large scale. He reasons in this way: "Perhaps I may succeed, and if I don't I will be no worse off than I am now, for $100,000 taken from nothing, nothing reof fortune and is persuaded to trade off his estate for lots in a Western city, with large avenues, and costly palaces, and lake steam ers smoking at the wharves, and rail trains eoming down with lightning speed from every direction. There it is all on paper! The city has never been built nor the rail-roads constructed, but everything points that way, and the thing will be done as sure as you live. Well, the man goes on, stopping at no fraud or outrage. In his splendid equipage he dashes past, while the honest equipage he dashes past, while the honest laborer looks up and wipes the sweat from his brow and says, "I wonder where that man got all his money?" After a while the bubble bursts. Creditors rush in. The law clutches, but finds nothing in its grasp. The men who were swindled say, "I don't know how I could have ever been deceived by that man," and the pictorials, in handsome woodcuts, set forth the hero who in ten years had genius enough to fail for $150,000!

And that is the process by which many

And that is the process by which many have been tempted through limitation of capital to rush into inbyrinths from which they could not be extricated. I would not want to chain honest enterprise. I would not want to block up any of the avenues for honest accumulation that open before young men. On the contrary, I would like to cheer them on and rejoice when they reach the goal, but when there are such multitudes of men going to ruin for this life and the life that is to come through wrong notions of what are lawful spheres of enterprise it is the duty of the Church of God, and the ministers of religion, and the friends of all young men, to utter a plain, emphatic, unmis-takable protest. These are the influences that drown men in destruction and per-

Again, a great many of our business men are tempted to overanxiety and care. know that nearly all commercial businesses are overdone in this day. Smitten with the love of quick gain, our cities are crowded with men resolved to be rich at all hazards. They do not care how money comes if it only comes. Our best merchants are thrown into competition with men of more means and less conscience, and if an opportunity of accumulation be neglected one hour some one else picks it up. From January to December the struggle goes on. Night gives no quiet to limbs tossing in restlessness nor to be being the on. Aight gives no quiet to immos tossing in restlessness nor to a brain that will not stop thinking. The dreams are harrowed by imaginary loss and flushed with imaginary gains. Even the Sabbath cannot dam back the tide of anxiety, for this wave of worldliness dashes clear over the churches and leaves its foam on Bibles and prayer books. Men who are living on salaries or by the cultivation of the soil cannot understand the wear and tear of the body and mind to which our merchants are subjected when they do not know but that their livelihood and their business honor are dependent upon the uncertainties of the next hour. This excitement of the brain, this corroding care of the heart, this strain of effort that exhausts the spirit, sends a great many of our best men in midsends a great many of our best men in middle life into the grave, their life dashed out against money safes. They go with their stori on their backs. They trudge like camels, sweating, from Aleppo to Damascus. They make their life a crucifixion. Standing behind desks and counters, banished from the fresh air, weighed down by carking cires, they are so many suicides. Oh, I wish I could to-day rub out some of these lines of care; that I could lift some of the burdens from the heart; that I could give relaxation to some of these worn muscles. It is time for you to begin to take it a little easier. Do your best and then trust God for the rest. Do not fret. God manages all the affairs of your life, and He manages them for the best. Consider the lilies. They always have robes.

The merchant came home from the tent. The merchant came home from the store. There had been a great disposter there. He opened the front door and said in the midst of his family circle: "I am ruined. Everything is gone. I am all ruined." His wife said, "I am left," and the little child threw up its hands and said, "Papa, I am here." The aged grandmother, seated in the room, said, "Then you have all the promises of God beside, John." And he burst into tears and said: "God forgive me that I have been so ungrateful! I find I have a great many things left. God forgive me!" Again, I remark that many of our business

Again, I remark that many of our business men are tempted to neglect their home duties. How often it is that the store and home clash, but there ought not to be any collision. It is often the case that the father is the mere treasurer of the family, a sort of agent to see that they have dry goods and groceries. The work of family government he does not touch. Once or twice in a year he calls the children up on a Sabbath afternoon, when he has a half hour he does not exactly know what to do with, and in that faltered, men whose hearts are enlisted in half hour be disciplines the children and every good work and whose hands have chides them and corrects their faults and blessed every great charity. The church of gives them a great deal of good advice, and God can afford to extend to them her symall | children do not do better when they have the wonderful advantage of that semi-angual castigation.

The family table, which ought to be the place for pleasant discussion and cheerful-ness, often becomes the place of perilous expedition. If there be any blessing asked at all, it is cut off at both ends and with the be millionaires forever. But I thought it hand on the carving knife. He counts on would be appropriate to-day and useful for me to talk about the trials and temptations of our business men and try to offer some goes to the head, and he starts down the street, and before the family have arisen from the table he has bound up another bundle of goods and says to the customer, "Anything more I can do for you to-day, the hoop and chase the ball and jump rope with his children, ought never to have been tempted out of a crusty and unredeem-able solitariness. If you want to keep your children away from places of sin yo only do it by making your home attractive You may preach sermons and advocate re-forms and denounce wickedness, and yet your children will be captivated by the glitbefore the first shot was fired. At the first tering saloon of sin unless you can make hard dun they surrendered. Their knees your home a brighter place than any other place on earth to them. Ob. you can afford it, bring books and pic-tures and cheerful entertainments to the household. But above all teach those children, not by half an hour twice a year on the Sabbath day, but day after day and every day teach them that religion is a great gladness; that it throws chains of gold about the neck; that it takes no spring from the foot, no bittaeness from the heart, no sparkle from the eye, no ring from the laughter, but that "her ways are ways of pleasant-ness, and all her paths are peace." I sympathize with the work being done in many of our cities by which beautiful rooms are set apart by our Young Men's Christian Associa-tions, and I pray God to prosper them in all things. But I tell you there is something back of that and before that. We need more consecrated, cheerful Christian everywhere. happy,

Again I remark that a great many of our business men are tempted to put the attainment of money above the value of the sou!, It is a grand thing to have plenty of money. The more you get of it the better, if it come honesty and go usefully. For the lack of it stekness dies without medicine, and hunger Etocks are the dice with which he gam-les. Some man at the East, liv- When I hear a man in canting tirade against ing on a fat homestead, meets this gambler money—a Christian man—as though it had no possible use on earth and he had no inthat the heaven that would be appropriate or him would be an everlasting poo While, my friends, we do admit there is such a thing as the lawful use of money -a profitable use of money-let us rec ognize also the fact that money cannot satisfy a man's soul; that it cannot glitter in the dark valley; that it cannot pay our fare across the Jordan of death; that it cannot unlock the gate of heaven. There are men in all occupations who seem to act as though they thought that a pack of bonds and mort-gages could be traded off for a title to heaven and as though gold would be a lawful tender in that place where it is so com-mon that they make pavements out of it. Salvation by Christ is the only salvation. Treasures in heaven are the only incorruptile treasures.

Have you ever ciphered out in the rule of loss and gain the sum, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" However fine your apparel, the own soul?" However fine your apparel, the winds of death will flutter it like rags. Homespun and a threadbare coat have sometimes been the shadow of coming robes made white in the blood of the Lamb. The pearl of great price is worth more than any gem you can bring from the ocean, than Australian or Brazilian mines strung in one carcanet. Seek after God, find His righteousness, and all shall be well here-all shall be well here-

Some of you remember the shipwreck of the Central America. That noble ship had, I think, about 500 passengers aboard. Suddenly the storm came, and the surges tramped the decks and swung into the hatches, and there went up a hundred voiced death shriez. The foam on the jaw of the wave. The pitching of the steamer as though it were leaping a mountain. The dismal flare of the signal rockets. The long cough of the steam pipes. The hiss of extinguished furnaces. The walking of God on the wave! The steamer went not down without a struggle. As the passengers stationed themselves in rows to bail out the vessel, hark to the thump of the buckets, as men unused to toil, with blistered hands and strained muscle, tug for their lives. There is a sail seen against the sky. The flash of the distress gun is noticed; its voice heard not, for it is choked in the louder booming of the sea. A few passengers escaped, but the steamer gave one great lurch and was gone! So there are some men who sail on prosperously in life. All's well, all's well. But at last some financial disaster comes—a euroclydon Down they go! The bottom of the commer cial sea is strewn with shattered hulks, because your property goes do not let your soul go. Though all ejse perish, save that, for I have to tell you of a more stupendous shipwreck than that which I just mentioned. God launched this world 6000 years ago. It God launched this world 6000 years ago. It has been going on under freight of mountains and immortals, but one day it will stagger at the cry of fire. The timbers of rock will burn, the mountains flame like masts, and the clouds like sails in the judgment hurricane. Then God shall take the passengers off the deck, and from the berths those who have long been asleep in Jesus and Ho will set them, for heavend the Jesus, and He will set them far beyond the reach of storm and peril. But how many shall go down will never be known until it shall be announced one day in heaven. The shipwreck of a world! So many millions saved! So many millions drowned! Oh, my dear hearers, whatever you lose, though your houses go, though your lands go, though all your earthly possessions perish, may God Almighty, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, save all your souls!

them for the best. Consider the lilies. They always have robes.

Behold the fowls of the air! They always have nests. Take a long breath. Bethink betimes that God did not make you for a pack horse. Dig yourselves out from among the hogsheads and the shelves, and in the light of the holy Sabbath day resolve that you will give to the winds your fears, and your fretfulness, and your distresses. You brought nothing into the world, and it is very certain you can carry nothing out. Having food and raiment, be therewith consequence of the grasshopper Crops.

The Grasshopper Crops

They have over 400 of these matching in S000 bushels of grasshoppers daily. Thus far the hoppers have not invaded the grain fields. The frequent rains have kept the grass green and tender, and they have contented themselves feeding on this.

SHOOTING A BEAR.

In the "History of Athens County," Ohio, Joseph Bobo elates an adventure in which his father took a leading part. He and one of his neighbors, a Mr Shidler, found a hole in the rocks which they thought might conceal a bear. Mr. Bobo lighted a torch and started to explore, while Suidler stood outside ready to shoot if Bruin tried to escape.

" Father went into the cave about twenty-five feet, and was on the point of giving up the search, when suddenly a bear, which had been crouching behind a rock. rose up and struck the torch with his paw. The torch fell to the floor and was extin-

" Father didn't wait for ceremony, but got out of the cave as quickly as possible, and told Shidler what had happened. All remained quiet, and after waiting awhile, father lighted another torch and went in again to shoot the bear. He proceeded cautiously, and the moment his eye fell on the bear he fired, but only wounded the

" Bruin uttered a tremendous growl and father saw him coming. Quick as thought father threw down the torch and lay flat on his face. The bear rushed for the mouth of the cave, clawing viciously at father's head and body as he passed ovor him, but Shidler was ready for the brute, and when he showed h elf at the hole gave him an ounce of lead that settled him.

" Father's wounds, though not serious, were bad enough to leave scars for the rest of his life. The bear weighed 390 pounds.'

TOYS OF BABY KINGS.

The directors of the Grafton Galleries in arranging their scimirable exhibition of 'Fair Children" have not forgotten to include in their collection specimens of the toys and toy books of bygone days. Here you may see what playthings the Egyptian children used ages and ages ago, so far back even as B. C. 2300. More curious even are the dolls of ancient Thebes, made out of flat pieces of wood, almost shapeless and entirely unlike their elegant, well-modeled successors of to-day. Coming to comparatively modern times, the exhibits become more intelligible and interesting. The beautiful miniature toys in silver, of the time of Charles I., fireplace, fire-irons, and kitchen utensils on which the most careful workmanship has been lavished, or the exquisite dolls' tea service in the same precious metal.

In another case will be found an old Nuremberg feeding bottle, made of glass, engraved with coats of arms and having a highly ornamental gold or gilt top and nipple. From Nuremberg also comes a baby's rattle made of silver (451). The little gloves worn by an infant who was christened in Watford Church in 1730. The infants' bells of the time of Louis XIV and the miniature knife and fork and Italian rattle in the same case ace interesting. A greater interest attaches, especially in the eyes of that great poets' many worshipers, to the coral and bells used by Shelly when an infant.-Philadelphia Re-

A VERY CURIOUS BIRD.

If a child was asked what ability a bird had which was not possessed by other creatures, he would probably reply, "the power to fly." So a bird who could not fly would seem to him a contradiction; yet there is such a bird, and be is called the penguin, says the Boston Standard.

The penguin does not fly, but he can walk upon the land and swim in the water. He swims in the water as a duck does, and his pictures show him to look not unlike a duck swimming. But upon the land he sits in a peculiar upright position, with his queer little apologies for wings tucked close to his side. Penguins inhabit the southern seas and assemble together by thousands, sitting in stiff rows along the shore, or walking in the strange upright position. The penguin subsists, as might be expected, upon fish, which he swallows whole.

The penguin makes no nest. The mother ays but one egg at a time, and carries this about with her under her absurd little wing or under her leg, as some naturalists say, In this style she takes good care of it until the baby penguin appears when both parents go out and fish for his sustenance. With two parents working for one child, the baby penguin should be well provided for, and he probably is.

There are many varieties of penguins, their habits and appearance being much alike. They are very noisy birds, making a harsh braying sound. They are not afraid of men an! show a disposition to fight if molested. These birds are about three feet

The Largest Bottle.

At the Bordeaux exhibition, which will be opened shortly, will be seen the largest bottle ever made. It will be no less than thirty-five meters, or nearly 115 feet high, and it will represent a bottle of tonic bitters. To the Bordeaux exhibition it will be what the Eiffel Tower was to the Paris exhibition of 1889. The bottle will be in the center of the ground, and people will be admitted to the interior. Two enormous doors will give access to the ground floor, where there is to be a winding staircase leading to the neck awl." of the bottle, at the top of which there will be a large refreshment room. Leading to the first, second and third floors, there will be two spacious staircases, each of 160 steps. They will end about half way up, after which there will be a terrace, with room for thirtyfive people upon it, whence a fine view of the exhibition grounds and the city will be obtained. The whole will be surmounted by a klosque in the guise of a cork, which will afford shelter from the sun or rain.

The Throat.

A new method of examining the larynx or trachea directly, without the intervention of a mirror or prism, has been devised by Dr. Kirstein, of Berlin. The patient is placed on his back, with his head hanging down, an aesophagoscope is introduced, and then a tube ten inches long is passed behind the epiglottis and lighted by an electroscope; the larynx can then be seen by the naked eye.
