OUR CONFUSING MONEY TERMS.

From the Philadelphia Times.

A Norristown correspondent asks the Times to explain "what the following terms mean, as they are the subject of discussion and the legal or practical meaning is disputed--viz.: bimetallism, gold standard, free coinage and 16 to 1."

Surprising as it may appear, in view of the very general discussion of these money terms alike in public journals, in political addresses and in the general disputations which prevail among the people in their leisure hours, their precise meaning is very widely misunderstood and variously interpreted, and a concise explanation of them may seem appropriate.

Bimettallism is the use of the two chief precious metals, silver and gold, as a double standard currency. The gold dollar and the silver dollar are made legal tender by the government, and thus, by the action of the government, made of equal value regardless of the variance in the intrinsic value of the coin. Our gold dollar has never varied in value for the reason that it has been the standard of value, not only here but throughout all nations of the world, and a gold coin is stamped by every government that creates it correspondent.

laws twenty years earlier. Soon after 1873 the immense production of silver greatly reduced its commercial value, and then the silver producers of the country demanded the return to silver coinage on the basis of 16 to 1, as 16 ounces of silver were then not equal to one ounce of gold, and the silver producers would profit by the sale of their product to the government.

In 1878 the, policy of the silverites prevailed, and silver dollars were coined in large sums until we aggregated some $500,000,000, which today are worth less than $300,000,000 in fact, and the silver coin and bullion owned by the government is now worth nearly $100,000,000 less than the government paid for it.

We are maintaining bimetallism and the double standard today by the government stamping its flat of 100 cents of value upon a 53 cent dollar, and the government practically pays the difference in gold. The gold standard of money is a policy that requires all other money than gold to be redeemed in gold, and therefore equivalent to gold in value. The United States maintains the gold standard, and redeems its 53 cent silver dollars practically in gold when demanded, and redeems all its paper of every shade and kind in gold, and pays all its bonds and other obligations in gold when required.

In Mexico, China, Japan, India, and some smaller governments, they have the silver standard, and the silver dollars of those countries, although containing from 4 to 6 grains of silver more than the American dollar, circulate in their own countries and in all other countries at a value of about 55 cents. The free silver standard countries circulate their legal tender silver at its intrinsic value.

Free coinage, as defined by a bill now pending in the United States Senate in shape of an amendment to the House tariff or revenue bill, means simply this-that the man who produces or owns 53 dollars' worth of silver bullion may deliver it to any United States Mint for free coinage, and receive therefor 100 legal tender dollars. In other words, the government by free coinage would be compelled to buy all the silver produced at nearly double its market value, by issuing in payment of the same legal tender dollars worth intrinsically but 53 cents, but which the government must make and Summer goods, a stock that is the latest from the mills and facgood for 100 cents in gold.

Ask to see -that 16 ounces of silver shall produce them. You may want something in Underclothing. We think we in our coinage the same number of dolhave just what you want, a full and complete line. Dry Goods and lars that one ounce of gold will produce. If the metals were coined ac-Dress Goods never were so cheap, and such quality for the money is cording to their intrinsic value, it would now require over 30 ounces of silver to produce the same number of dollars coined from one ounce of gold. Such, in brief, is the explanation of $14.00. Cant be beat in price. Other line have as big bargains.

If it required an annual outlay of $100.00 to insure a family against any serious consequences from an attack of bowel complaint during the year there are many who would feel it their duty to pay it; that they could not afford to risk their lives, and those of their family for such an amount.
