The The The

Best. Rest. Test.

There are two kinds of sarsaparilla: The best—and the rest. The trouble is they look alike. And when the rest dress like the best who's to tell them apart? Well, "the tree is known by its fruit." That's an old test and a safe one. And the taller the tree the deeper the root. That's another test. What's the root,—the record of these sarsaparillas? The one with the deepest root is Ayer's. The one with the richest fruit; that, too, is Ayer's. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has a record of half a century of cures; a record of many medals and awards—culminating in the medal of the Chicago World's Fair, which, admitting Ayer's Sarsaparilla as the best—shut its doors against the rest. That was greater honor than the medal, to be the only Sarsaparilla admitted as an exhibit at the World's Fair. If you want to get the best sarsaparilla of your druggist, here's an infallible rule: Ask for the best and you'll get Ayer's. Ask for Ayer's and you'll get the best.

An Accidental Discovery.

When Sir Humphrey Davy was a boy of sixteen, a little girl one day came to him in great excitement and asked why, when she rubbed two pieces of cane together, they should make a spark of light. Humphrey was a studious lad, who spent hours in thinking out scientific problems. He patted the child's curly head and said: "I do not know, dear. Let us see if they really do make a light, and then we will try to find out why." He soon found that the little girl was right; the pieces of cane, if rubbed together quickly, give a tiny light. Then he set to work to find out the reason; and after some time—thanks to the observing powers of his little friend, and his own kindness to her in not impatiently telling her not to "worry," as so many might have done—Humphrey Davy made the first of his interesting discoveries. Every reed, cane, and grass has an outer skin of flinty stuff, which protects the inside from insects, and also helps the frail-looking leaves to stand upright.

A poor man with a sunny spirit will get more out of life than a wealthy grumbler.

Rattled.

To make a mad dog to order, tie a tin pan to his tail. A man made mad is one who, after suffering 10, 15, 20 years with rheumatism, finds that by the use of a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil he is cured. He feels the waste of his life in pain, with the loss of time, place and money, and then reflects that for the expense of 50c. he could have saved all his and lived free of pain; it is enough to make him mad. Most of our sufferings are intensified by delay in seeking relief, and the more worth knowing as regards the cure of pain that we find out at last only by the use of the best cure. It is worth knowing that for the cure of rheumatism there is special virtue in The Great Remedy for Pain, St. Jacobs Oil, and as so much can be saved by its use, the cost is really nothing.

Be careful where you step, and those who follow you will stumble less.

That's the price of Tetterine at drug stores, or by mail for price in stamps from J. T. Shuprine, Savannah, Ga.

A Sumptuous House.

Two remarkable discoveries of a long distant past have just been made in Rome. At the back of the Pincian hill, where it overshadows the via Margutta, excavations have recently revealed the existence of a villa which has been attributed to the first century of the Christian era. It is a sumptuous construction which now returns to the light. Two bas-reliefs of about five square yards, one of which is broken in fragments and the other intact, exhibit a series of designs which are said to illustrate scenes in the life of the owner of the villa. This owner is said to be Trinitus Montei, an artist of considerable reputation whose mural paintings adorn many houses of the imperial period. A gold-grounded mosaic decorating the interior of a niche, and some painted walls were also discovered, as well as two hermes or termini marble posts which stand at the corners of garden walks, and are surmounted by busts. It is expected that a series of columns in their original sites will soon be brought to light.

A VETERAN'S WIFE.

Affected With Heart Disease and Given Up to Die. Saved in a Wonderful Way.

From the Press, Utica, N. Y.

There is no one better known or respected in the village of Brookfield, Madison Co., New York, than Mrs. John Fisk, the wife of an old resident and veteran of the war of the Rebellion. In April of this year, Mrs. Fisk lay at death's door from neuralgia and heart disease, the family physician having recommended her to settle all her worldly affairs, as she was liable to be taken at any minute, and inquiring friends expected at each visit to hear that she had passed away.

But Mrs. Fisk, to the surprise of her neighbors and physicians, suddenly began to mend, and now she is as strong and healthy a woman of her advanced age (76 years) as can be found, and, really, does not appear nearly as old as she is. The following is her own story of how she was cured:

"I consider it a duty to myself and the community to tell of my extraordinary recovery from what was thought by my physicians, my husband and friends to be a fatal illness. I had long been suffering from neuralgia in its worst form, enduring agonies that only those who have undergone such torments know, until my heart became so affected functionally and organically, that the doctor said I was liable at any time to pass away. He had done all in his power for me, and I thank him much for his kindness and attention, and believe him to be a good, faithful physician. I was not disposed to die, however, if I could help it, and he having done all he could, I felt at liberty to try other means that held out a chance of life, and determined to try a remedy that had been recommended by a friend who had been at death's door from rheumatism and heart disease, but who now is in good health.

"Whatever doubt I may have had as to this remedy's efficacy is a dissimilar disease, to that from which he had suffered, was dispelled on reading in the Press of a case identical with my own being cured, with the name and address of the person who had been so benefited. So my husband who now was anxious that I should at once take the six pills, purchased for me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I took them according to directions, and within a very short time the pains began to disappear, my heart's action became normal, and four weeks ago I ceased taking them, as I am entirely cured, and able to do my household work as well as when I was a young woman.

"I had always, until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, looked with suspicion on all advertised proprietary medicines, but now my ideas have undergone a wondrous change in that direction, for under God's all-wise Providence, 'Pink Pills' has renovated me, and apparently given me a new lease of life.

"This is no secret in this locality, and I hope this certificate may be the means of other sufferers in distant places securing the same benefits that I have received.

A Problem.

Talking of the hat, it is sometimes hard to know what to do with it. In church, the man who puts his hat under the seat invariably finds, at the end of the service, that it has wandered afar from the spot where he placed it, and that some heavy-footed lady has mistaken it for a footstool. Sarah Bernhard, in her reciting days, used to relate a story of a man at a musical who lost a charming young lady because he couldn't see her to her carriage without his hat, and he couldn't get his hat because a stout man had fallen asleep in a chair planted directly before a chifonier on which the chaplain had been placed. It was a tragic tale, and truly sad because it might so easily have been sadly true.

All things are good and beautiful to those who have the talisman which transforms the common into the rare, the accustomed into the precious; and that talisman is love—the love which selfishness is only too apt to destroy.

1,340,000 CONSTANT WEARERS.

On the Shores of Maryland.

As the waters of Maryland produce one-third of the oyster supply of the world, the quantity of shells landed on her shores is enormous, and the shell mountains, like Boffin's dust heaps, are no inconsiderable features of the landscape. Until very lately the canning firms had much trouble in getting rid of the shells, having to pay, in fact, for the removal of all they could not give away. Recently, however, they have been able to sell them. They are now shipped to all parts of the country and are utilized variously for roads, for lime and for making coal gas. They have been found also to serve almost as well as stone in the manufacture of special grades of iron for railroad beds. Cultivators of oysters also employ them, having found that they afford suitable surfaces for young oysters to attach themselves to. They are likewise used to some extent as chicken food. They are very good for hens, the shells of eggs being largely made of them. The trade received twenty-five thousand dollars in a single year for the empty shells.

When love gives it enriches itself, but what covetousness keeps it takes from itself.

The British in Africa.

The English forces have struck three telling blows against the savage kings who have lately been committing horrid outrages in the Niger provinces in Africa. They have utterly routed the King of Benin, near the coast, who caused a party of unarmed Englishmen, on a peace commission, to be assassinated; another body, supported by a river flotilla, all under the auspices of the Royal Niger Company, drove the army of the King of Nupe to his capital, which was carried by assault, the cruel slave raider and his supporters escaping by flight; the third conquest has just been made of Iorin. The Nupe forces retreated, as was surmised, to the neighboring province of Iorin, whence the company's little army, with its effective arms and machine guns followed them, and the Iorinians have, in turn been routed. They tried, by treachery, to entrap Major Arnold. They sent messengers to his camp as though they were desirous of peace, while an attack was being arranged. Their trick was discovered just in time. Surrounded by a body of 5,000 men, with 800 horses, the English leader only saved his forces by forming them into a solid square. The modern weapons did effective service on the enemy, to whom they were entirely new. There was sharp fighting for a day or two, then the town was bombarded and captured. These three campaigns have been accomplished within two months. The result must inspire great respect for British rule, and make for peace in a region which has been terribly ravaged.—New York Independent.

The Tiger Snake.

There is no known antidote for the bite of the tiger snake of Australia. Persons bitten die almost instantly, and the government has a standing offer of $5000 for anyone who will discover a remedy. Some few years ago a man named Underwood actually discovered an efficacious antidote. To prove its value he allowed himself to be bitten repeatedly by snakes in full possession of the power to kill. He offered his discovery to the government for $10,000, but this amount they thought exorbitant. One day he gave an exhibition before some government officials, but being much under the influence of liquor, he did not recollect what he had done with his antidote, and he died shortly after the snake bite, his secret perishing with him.

About the Sapphire.

It is commonly believed that the sapphire is known only as a gem of a rich velvety blue in color. As a matter of fact the sapphire occurs in various hues. In Ceylon, where the finest specimens of this gem are found, it ranges from the soft, velvety blue to the peacock blue, graduated in the latter to an almost faultless white. It also occurs in whites, greens and yellows, the latter shade being known as the Oriental topaz and the green the Oriental emerald. The white sapphires are often found clouded or streaked with blue, so that many specimens are cut which are white when looked at transversely, but having a bit of fine blue tint on the under point. Then there is the red sapphire, or Ceylon ruby. It is valued as highly as the finest Burmese rubies. These most highly prized are of a rich pigeon blood or rose red color.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Sad Ending to a Wedding.

A sad ending to a wedding occurred at Udine, in Italy. Teresa del Bianco and Signor Niendemo were being married in the presence of numerous friends, and the service has proceeded to the point where the priest asks: "Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" when the bride having whispered "I will," fell down and expired. Apoplexy was the cause of death.

Electric Light in the Arctic.

Electricity played an important part in the Arctic voyage of the Fram, Dr. Nansen's staunch vessel. The electric lights were daily used on board, according to the Elektroteknisk Tidsskrift, of Christiania, until May, 1895, when the wearing out of the gearing and the fact that portions of the apparatus were needed for making snow shoes made it necessary to dispense with the use of the dynamo, which was worked by a windmill. Though at times the accumulators froze solidly; yet the acid-blended ice proved a fine electrolyte. Electricity, too, fired the mine shots which freed the Fram from the ice floes.

The Cannon-Car.

Military journals express interest in an invention by which it is proposed to arm a self-moving car, driven by a sixteen horse-power engine, with two rapid fire cannon, mounted on pivots so as to sweep in all directions. Having four broad-tired wheels, it is claimed that the car can run across a level country (barring fences, of course) at the rate of 45 miles an hour. Terrible pictures are drawn of the havoc that such cars could make on any battle field. Only one man is needed to operate the car and its cannon, and he is protected by strong steel shields.

Motherhood.

A mother who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessing of a good constitution. The child fairly drinks in health from its mother's robust constitution before birth, and from a healthy mother's milk after.

Is not that an incentive to prepare for a healthy maternity?

Do you know the meaning of what is popularly called those "longings," or cravings, which beset so many women during pregnancy? There is something lacking in the mother's blood. Nature cries out and will be satisfied at all hazards.

One woman wants sour things, another wants sweets, another wants salt things, and so on. The real need all the time is to enrich the blood so as to supply nourishment for another life, and to build up the entire generative system, so that the birth may be possible and successful.

If expectant mothers would fortify themselves with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for twenty years has sustained thousands of women in this condition, there would be fewer disappointments at birth, and they would not experience those annoying "longings."

In the following letter to Mrs. Pinkham, Mrs. Whitney demonstrates the power of the Compound in such cases. She says:

"From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three, I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was soon relieved. After I was married, the doctor said I would never be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and a half. The next time I commenced at once and continued to take your Compound through the period of pregnancy, and I said then, if I went my full time and the baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old and is as healthy and hearty as one could wish.

"I am so thankful that I used your medicine, for it gave me the robust health to transmit to my child. I cannot express my gratitude to you; I never expected such a blessing. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—Mrs. L. Z. WHITNEY, 5 George St., E. Somerville, Mass.
