In connection with this it is interesting to note that the London "Speaker" would take a short cut to sanitary reform by prosecuting the responsible officials. If that should be applied in this country the water supplies of many cities now polluted would be changed for the better. WHERE IS IT GOING TO STOP?

A startling dispatch was sent to the Associated Press from Harrisburg recently. It related to inordinate increases of state offices and salaries and showed conclusively that reform is necessary in the management of state affairs. It is asserted that the expenses technically set down for the three branches of the state government-executive, legislative and judicial,-although now amounting to $3,127,495 .-75 for two years, in reality constitute only about one-seventh of the total outlay for that period. The aggregate alone, it is said, exceed by about $1,same purpose in 1889. It is nearly $1, 500,000 in excess of the outlay authorized by the legislature in 1883. Then the interest of Senator Hanna. They have now increased so that in 1895 they amounted to 13,681,701.74.

It is claimed that owing to the annual collection of certain money that receipts and expenditures is deceptive. Taking the sinking fund transfer and personal property taxes returned to the McKinley hasn't raised the price of counties in 1896, for instance, the net revenue last year is shown to have a farm has been sold under the ham- been $10,226,820. > The obituary of the New York Sun, Monday, on the death of its great editor was brief. It read thus:

THE ONLY PROBLEM.

If the Democrats Come Out Brown and Rit, ter Will Both be Elected.

Probably the most inexcusable blunder a Democratic voter could make would be the casting of a vote for either Swallow or Thompson. Each of these gentlemen may prove a useful instrumentality for reform, but only to the extent of the votes they may succeed in luring from the Republican party. Every Democratic vote given to either will be a vote lost to the good cause at stake and a half vote for Republican ring rule. Democratic administration in 1883 and again in 1890, though only partial, checked extravagance and closed the door to a considerable extent against thievery. And this boom was secured because the Democrats in those years were wise enough not to throw away their strength upon Prohibitionists or Independents, but allowed the Republicans a monopoly of that business and themselves voted their straight party ticket.

The situation of those years is virtually repeated this year and the same tactics will bring an equally gratifying Messrs. Brown and Ritter are at least the peers of either Swallow or Thompson in ability. They are gentlemen of unassailed rectitude. They are solemnly pledged to complete an unrelenting retrenchment and reform. And they have a chance of being elected, which certainly will not be seriously declared as to either Swallow or Thompson, by any man having even the remotest comprehension of the political possibilities in Pennsylvania.

Some of Swallow's super-enthusiastic friends have gone so far as to give out that Mr. Brown was to withdraw in his favor. It is needless to say that there never was the least reason for expecting such a silly move, neither Mr. Brown nor his friend ever even for an instant entertained the possibility of it. It would be the rankest absurdity for an organized force of 433,000 voters to abandon the field to an insignificant minority of 19,000, and these latter handicapped by Prohibitionism, a policy the people of Pennsylvania are not likely to accept for many years to come, if ever. There is but one unsolved problem in the fight against the Treasury Ring and its iniquities. Will the Democrats come out? If they do, the election of Messrs. Brown and Ritter is assured. The factional feuds in the Republican party, and the disgust of the better element of its followers evoked by the rascalities of its leaders will render it impossible for that party, to poll much more than fifty per cent. of its 1896 vote. Brown and Ritter will be the next state treasurer and auditor general if the Democrats wish it and goods at reasonable rates. will come to the polls to register that
