No Difference.

Physical troubles of a like nature coming from different causes are often a puzzle to those who suffer pain as to their treatment and cure, as in the case of lumbago from cold or a strain in some way to the same muscles. The treatment of such need not differ one with the other. Both are bad enough, and should have prompt attention, as nothing disables so much as lame back, The use of St. Jacobs Oil will settle the question. Its efficacy is so sure in either case there is no difference in the treatment and no doubt of the cure.

WEEKLY SERMONS.

Rev. Dr. Talmage Preaches on the Evils of Clubs.

The Ninth of the New York Herald's Competitive Sermons Is Entitled "Sunshine, But a Cloud; a Cloud, But Sunshine"-Dr. Talmage on Club Evils. Texr: "He was a mighty man in valor, but he was a leper."—II Kings v., 1.

Over every human life, however bright the sunshine, a cloud may come. Every person covets what he chooses to consider success; some riches, some fame, some pleasure, some domestic felicity. No one, however, realizes all his ambitions-indeed, not all are worth realizing. There is always a something which mars happiness possibilities of anguish in every condition. spots weaker than others in the strongest bar of steel, the capability of tarnish in the purest gold, spots on the sun. A per-son's weaknesses—consequently his sources of suffering—may lie just beside his strongest traits of character. He may be honest but over exacting; strong-willed, but obsti-nate; economical, but penurious; just, but unmerciful; courageous, but censorious; affectionate, but passionate. Unselfishness may sharpen daggers that pierce the heart, and intensity of affection may be a pledge of keenest pangs.

A person, it may be, acquires riches, but health is gone, or domestic happiness has taken departure, or waters of grief are looding the soul. Pre-eminently successful along some lines, he is conspicuously unsuccessful along others. It takes but little to render a person miserable; it takes much to render some happy. As it needs only a trifle to prevent wealth from producing contentment, is it a mark of wisdom to sacrifice for its acquisition that which is of more value-health, comfort, reputation, character, principle, con-science—the hope of an eternal world? "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things he possesseth." Does the river consist in the driftwood it is carrying to the ocean? "Fine feathers make fine birds," but a fine residence and a fine equipage are not capable of always making

Of those who covet fame, some win the prize; but cares increase, responsibilities augment, disappointments multiply and ar-rows of envy become keener and more umerous. He who courts public favor ourts a fickle damsel, one who, disqualifled to bestow happiness, may flatter littleness and condemn greatness. In history there are few sadder chapters than those which record the cares, worries and reverses of some who acquired prominence. Moses was a mighty man, but he was driven into exile, and sleeps in an unknown grave. Elijah was a rare specimen of true greatness, but Abab's folly and Jezebel's hatred came near driving him to suicide. Daniel was a great man, but for his pe-culiar species of greatness. Nebuchadnezcar thought a lion's den the fittest place. Isaiah was a man of rare strength of character, but Manasseb laid him between two planks and sawed him in twain.

Such as desire to see the emptiness of human greatness would do well to read the biographies of the kings, sixty in number, who during six hundred years ruled the Eastern Roman empire, its capital Constantinople, and they may be inclined to thank God that they are permitted to live in obscurity. To some politicians we might say. "Thy god, O sycophant, hath cast thee off"-and there are more to follow in Greater New York and boss ridden Philaphia, men in the sunshine of prosperity, Husband-"Maria, wake up quick! but leprous all over. Is the Scriptural admonition, "Be humble," unworthy of no-tice? The man who is on his back in the cellar can get no lower-one thing for which he may be thankful. The man on the housetop may grow dizzy and, falling, may suddenly terminate his exalted career. Most persons desire to be on the mountain. great relief to have the children in summit few prefer the valley, though the school again?" Second Mother—"Well, winds are less flerce and the storms less > everlasting cloud, there may be sunshine. It is never so dark that it can be no darker, Discouragements are never so many that there are no grounds for thankfulness. A cloud on every pathway, and sunshine pos-sible in every heart. A burden on every ife, and no soul that may not thrill with A crook in every lot, and no crook tortuous that it may not end in celestial bliss. No trial without its alleviations. Poverty inspires energy, fosters self-reli-ance, prompts to industry and teaches us to prize the blessings we have without murmuring over those we have not. Ill-health forces attention to the laws of health. sweetens the disposition and directs atten-tion to the nearness of eternity's curtain. Bereavements have their alleviating com-pensations. Obscurity has its special ad-vantages. Physical disabilities have their compensations. The deaf are saved from hearing touch that is better never heard. The blind can see no frowns. The cripple is excused from running errands. The person who cannot read is delivered from the temptation to read the account of the last football game, the last pugilistic encounter, the most recent testimony in the Nack-Thorn trial and the plous gush emitted in prison walls over criminals.

It is well to observe that each person's lot, all things considered, is not widely different from that of others. The mountain has both rocks and synshine; the valley floods as well as waving harvests. The eyes that shed tears can beam love. JOSEPH S. VAN DYKE, D. D.,

CLUB EVILS. Moral Lessons Drawn by the Rev. Dr.

Talmage.

TEXT: "Let the young men now arise and play before us."—II Sam. ii., 14. There are two armies encamped by the pool of Gibeon. The time hangs heavily opened in sportfulness ended in violence, sach one taking his contestant by the hair, and then with the sword thrusting him in the side; so that which opened in innocent fun ended in the massacre of all the twenty-four sportsmen. Was there ever a better illustration of what was true then, and is true now, that that which is innocent may be made destructive?

At this season of the year the club-houses of our towns and cities are in full play. I have found out that there is a legitimate have found out that there is a legitimate and an illegitimate use of the club-house. In the one case it may become a healthful recreation, like the contest of the twenly-four men in the text when they began their play, in the other case it becomes the massacre of body, mind and soul, as in the case of these contestants of the text when they had gone too far with their sport. All intelligent ages have had their gatherings for political, social, artistic, literary purposes—gatherings characterized by the blunt old Anglo-Saxon designation of "club."

During the day they are comparatively lazy places. Here and there an aged man lazy piaces. Here and there an aged man reading a newspaper, or an employe dusting a sofa, or a clerk writing up the accounts; but when the curtain of the night falls on the natural day, then the curtain of the club-house hoists for the entertainment. Let us hasten up, now, the marble stairs. What an imperial hallway! On this side there are reading-rooms, where you find all newspapers and magazines. Or that side there is a library, where you find all books, from hermeneutics to the fairy tale. Coming in and out there are men, some of whom stay ten minutes, others stay many hours. Some of these are from luxurious homes, and they have excused themselves for a while from the domestic circle that they may enjoy the larger sociability of the club-house. These are from dismembered households, and they have a piain lodging somewhere, but they come to this club-room to have their chief enjoyment. One blackball amid ten votes will defeat a man's becoming a member. For rowdylsm, for drunkenness, for gambling, for any kind of misdemeanor, a member is dropped out. Brilliant club-house from top to bottom. The chandeliers, the plate, the furniture, the companionship, the literature, the social prestige, a complete enchantment.

But the evening is passing on, and so we hasten through the hall and down the steps and into the street, and from block to block until we come to another style of club-house. Opening the door, we find the fumes of strong drink and tobacco, something almost intolerable. These young men at this table, it is easy to understand what they are at, from the flushed cheek. the intent look, the almost angry way of tossing the dice, or of moving the "chips." They are gambling. At another table are en who are telling vile stories. They are three-fourths intoxicated, and between 12 and 1 o'clock they will go staggering, nooting, swearing, shouting on their way

As the hours of the night go away, the onversations becomes imbecile and more lebasing. Now it is time to shut up. Those who are able to stand will get out on the pavement and balance themselves against the lamppost, or against the railings of the The young man who is not able to stand will have a bed improvised for him in the clubhouse, or two not quite so overcome with liquor will conduct him to his father's house, and they will ring the door bell, and the door will open, and the two imbecile escorts will introduce into the hallway the ghastliest and most spectacle that ever enters a front door-s drunken son.

But I make a vast difference between I have belonged to four clubs: A theological club, a ball club, and two literary clubs. I got from them physical rejuvenation and moral health. What shall be the principle? If God will help me, I will lay down three principles by which you may judge whether the club where you are a member, or the club to which you have en invited, is a legitimate or an illegiti-

First of all, I want you to test the club its influences on home, if you have a home. I have been told by a prominent man in club life that three-fourths of the members of the great clubs of these cities are married men. That wife soon loses her influence over her husband who nervously and foolishly looks upon all evening absence as an assault on domesticity. How are the great enterprises of art and literature and beneficence and public weal to be carried on if every man is to have his world bounded on one side by his front doorstep, and on the other side by his back window, knowing nothing higher than his own attic, or nothing lower than his own cellar? That wife who becomes jealous of her husband's attention to art or literature, or religion, or charity, is breaking her own scepter of conjugal power. Let any Christian wife rejoice when her husband consecrates evenings to the service of God, or to charity, or to art, or to anything elevated; but let not men sacrifice home life to club life. I can point out to you a great many names of men who are guilty of this sacrilege. They are as genial as angels at the club-house, and as ugly as sin at hore. They are generous on all subjects of wine suppers, yachts and fast horses, but they are stingy about the wife's dress and the children's shoes. That man has made that which might be a healthful recreation an usurper of his affecons, and he has married it, and he is guilty of moral bigamy.

Another test by which you can find whether your club is legitimate or illegitimate—the effect it has on your secular occupation. I can understand how through such an institution a man can reach commercial successes. I hnow some men have formed their best business relations through ich a channel. If the club has advantaged On every human life, however dark the ou in an honorable calling it is a legitimate But has your credit failed? Are bargain-makers more cautious how they trust you with a bill of goods? Have the men whose names were down in the commercial agency At before they entered the club been going down ever since in commercial standing? Then look out! You and I every day know of commercial establishments going to ruin through the social exesses of one or two members. A third test by which you may know whether the club to which you belong, or the club to whose membership you are invited, is a legitimate club or an illegitimate club, is this: What is the effect on your sense of moral and religious obligations? Now.here are two roads into the future, the Christian and the unchristian, the safe and the unsafe. An institution or any association that confuses my idea in regard to that fact is a bad institution and a bad association. I had prayers before I joined the club. Did I have them after? I attended the house of God before I connected myself with the club. Since that union with the club do I absent myself from religious in-fluences? Which would you rather have in your hand when you come to die, a pack of cards or a Bible? Who would you rather have for your eternal companions, those men who spend their evening betting, gambling, swearing, carousing and telling vile stories, or your little child, that bright girl whom the Lord took?

I am going to make a very stout rope, on know that sometimes a rope-maker will take very small threads and wind them together, until after awhile they become ship cables. And I am going to take some very small, delicate threads and wind them very small, delicate threads and wind them together until they make a very stout rope. I will take all the memories of the marriage day, a thread of laughter, a thread of light. a thread of music, a thread of banqueting, a thread of congratulation, and I twist them together and I have one strand. Then I take a thread of the hour of the first advent in your house a thread of the dark. vent in your house, a thread of the dark-ness that preceded and a thread of the light on their hands. One army proposes a game of sword-fencing. Nothing could be more healthful and innocent. The other army bounded out at eventide to greet you, and bounded out at eventide to greet you, and then a thread of the beautiful dress in which you laid her away for the resurrec-tion. And then I twist all these threads accepts the challenge. Twelve men against twelve men, the sport opens. But something went adversely. Perhaps one of the swordsmen got an unlucky elip, or in some way had his ire aroused, and that which opened in sportfulness ended in violence, such one taking his contestant by the half. suffering Christ, and a thread of the white raiment of your loved ones before the throne, and a string of the harp cherubic and a string of the harp seraphic, and I twist them all together and I have a third strand. "Oh!" you say, "either strand is strong enough to hold fast a world." No. I will take these strands and I will twist them together, and one end of that rope I will fasten, not to the Communion table, for it shall be removed—not to the pillar of the organ; wind it 'round and 'round the cross of a sympathizing Christ, and, having fastened one end of the rope to the cross, I throw the other end to you. Lay hold of it! Pull for your life! Pull for heaven!

TRADING STAMPS LEGAL.

Law Against Them in California Declared Unconstitutional, The law prohibiting merchants from making gifts as an inducement to trade, which was primarily aimed at trading stamp enterprises, has received a knockout blow by Judge Campbell, of San Francisco, Cal, who decided the law to be unconstitutional, as an unwarranted invasion of the liberties of the citizen.

The decision affects a number of Eastern companies which have recently commenced operations there.

THE BRIDE ARRESTED.

It is Said Mrs. Crosby Has Two Other Husbands-Reading Traction Employes To Be Protected Against Attack-Northampton's Election Case is Charged to the County-Other State News.

As the outcome of a wedding at the parsonage of Rev. B. R. Zweizig, Reading, several arrests have been made and others will follow. The contracting parties were Sylvester Crosby and Ella Sheldy. It is said that Ella has two other husbands, and information has been sworn against her, charging her with bigamy. Her other alleg-ed hustands are said to be Isaac Breastpin, of Reading, and Henry Rothenberger, of Harrisburg. Mrs. Crosby gave bail.

John A. Rigg, president of the United Traction Company, of Reading, announces that the company will supply all its suburban conductors and motormen with revol vers. This action was taken in view of the recent murder of Conductor Galloway, near Norristown. Mr. Rigg says he expects no difficulty over the law on the subject of carrying concealed deadly weapons.

The Yester Block, a large office building. at McKeesport, was totally destroyed by fire. The block was erected two years ago at a cost of $100,000. The first floor was occupled by Yester's jewelry store, and the loss to the stock will reach $40,000. Bedell's gents' furnishing store will lose $10,000. An early morning fire at Bridgeville, on the Pan Handle Bailroad, about twelve miles south of McKeesport, destroyed six buildngs and an immense lumber yard. The loss will probably reach $30,000.

Chief of Police Briggs notified all who are running slot machines within the city limitr of Wilkes-Barre that they must discontinue the business, as it is a violation of the statute law and city ordinance. All violaters will hereafter be prosecuted. Similar notice was served last spring, and for some time thereafter there was a marked absence of all gambling of that sort. But gradually the lot business was revived until of late it was n a more flourishing condition than ever.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Krider, of Dry Holw, were thrown from a spring wagon at Birmingham, and received probably fatal inuries. The horses became frightened at a passing train. In trying to gain their freedom the animals overturned the wagon, throwing its occupants to the ground. The iorses trampled them in an effort to escape.

The reports of the State Mine Inspectors or the year ending December 1, 1897, shows that 1595 workmen were injured in the coal mines of the eight districts, into which the anthracite region is divided, during that time, Of these accidents 430 proved fatal and resulted in the creation of 229 widows, beides leaving 632 children fatherless.

Judge Scott at Easton, banded down an placing on the county the co-ts in the contested election cases, instituted by the Democrats defeated in the election in 1896. The costs will amount to over 88,000, Judge Scott said:-"These costs are not light, but it is due to the efficiency of the examiner and the techcical experience of counsel in this kind of proceeding that they are not more. Every election district was put in issue; testimony was taken covering 2429 printed pages, and he examiner's report with tabulated schedules of 155 typewritten pages, was filed in court ten months from the day first ppointed for the bearing.

Miss Esther A. Rayser met a shocking fate at Pottstown. She was 96 years of age and had been enfeebled by a severe illness. With the intention of coming down stairs she left her bed chamber. Whether was seized with vertigo or stumbled is not known. For some reason she fell headlong to the bottom of the steps and was picked up dead.

Policeman John C. Greer, of Conshohocken, was sentenced to six months in the county jail. He was convicted at the December term of court for involuntary manslaughter in shooting and killing Patrick Gallagher. Grant's Religious Side.

"I am a profound believer," said Gen. Grant, "in a special and a general providence that shapes the destiny of individuals and nations, but in such a way as not to destroy man's free agency."

On another occasion, while conversing with Dr. Cramer, his brotherin-law, about his experiences, he said that he always carried out what he had planned to do.

"Did you ever pray to God for aid and success?" asked Dr. Cramer.

"Often, mentally, but briefly," he answered. "I asked for strength and wisdom to carry to a successful termination my task. Like my mother, I never talk much about religion, but I think much. It is the all-important subject."

Grant, while President, spoke one day to his brother-in-law of the tremendous responsibility of the office. "I often." said be, "during the session of Congress, after a day of hard work and an evening spent in meeting social claims, sit up till it is far beyond midnight to study the various questions submitted for my action."

"Do you ever pray for wisdom and guidance?" asked his relative.

"Yes; night and day I ask God in silent prayer to aid me in performing any duties," he answered. "I believe in prayer, though I don't tal. about it." Dr. Cramer mentions a conversation wherein Grant told him that being present at a communion service in the Metropolitan Methodist Church of Washington, he requested Schuyler Colfax, the Vice President, who sat in a pew in front of him, to accompany him to the communion table.
