WEEKLY SERMONS.

Rev. Dr. Talmage Preaches on Practical Things.

"The Law of Kindness" is the Title of the New York Herald's Tenth Competitive Sermon-Dr. Talmage Preaches a Sermon to the Feminine Toilers.

Proverbs xxxi., 26. There are two superficial and somewhat prevalent notions of kindness which overook the truth of a law of kindness and hinder the fulfilment of that law. The first is that kindness is a happy accident of temperament. When Charles Lamb died Henry Crabb Robinson went to visit Mary Lamb, and she said to him: "Now, I call this very kind of you, not good natured, but very, very kind." Her distinction is just. Kindness is more than constitutional good naturedness. It implies discipline

The second notion associates kindness with Caristian etiquette and deportment, with something amiable and desirable, perhaps, but rather ornamental than essential. Consequently many religious and devout people are unkind in words and actions without any feeling of sinfulness on that account. Put away the notion of kindness which regards it as merely an of social intercourse and conceive it as an ssential element of all goodness, divine or human, and as comprehended under God's law of human life, Unkindness, like any other transgression of moral law, is wick-edness. Nor is it enough to try and not be unkind, for unless one tries to be kind he not only fails of duty, but will be unable to guard himself from actual unkind-

Kindness has its root in kinship. It im-plies relationship and affinity. Men are children of a common Father, and therefore brethren. Therein lies the signifi-cance of all that the Scriptures teach coneerning the essential, exceeding and ever-lasting loving kindness of God. There is kinship between Him and men, created in His image. Therein is grounded our human kinship and the law of brotherly kind-ness for all men, than which no law of human life has higher authority or sacred-er sanctions. As no one can be as good as he should and may be, so no one can do good as he should and may without striving to fulfill this law of the cultivation and manifestation of kindness. There is nothing else so powerful for good unless it be love, and ove as St. Paul says, is kind. It disarms prejudice and hatred, it converts distrust nto confidence, it overcomes all manner of svil with good. It brings out as nothing else can the latent and potential good things in people. Men have come to recog-nize and act upon this principle in their treatment and training of animals. How much more effective will be the training of children and the treatment of all human beings which is based upon kindly sympa-The safest assumption that can be made in all such matters is that kindness will meet all such response Kindness has insight and can detect signs of promise in the unpromising, while under its genial influences and delicate ministrathings they promise begin to be fulfilled. What else gives so great encouragement to the many who are struggling with adversity or temptation, correcting and changing just those depressed feelings of loneliness and neglect wherein the power of evil finds its most favorable conditions? Wordsworth speaks of

That portion of a good man's life-His little, nameless, upremembered acts of kindness and of love.

How suggestive that is of what is possible in this way of kindness, which works with magic power to transmute apparent have been suddenly huried, seemed to have have been suddenly huried, seemed to have nothing left them but a choice between nothing left them but a choice between the second states. weary pilgrim proved to be, as he drank it, a cup of precious wine. Kind words often, as Dante says of Beatrice's words, "more smiled than spoken!" Kind actions, costing little, but bestowing much! How easily they might be multiplied to the immeasurable cheer and comfort and enrichment of life! They make the gloomy smile, the angry grow meek, the suffering to cease from greaning; they light up hope, sweeten oltter thoughts, console sorrow, strengthen the faint and turn from sin; and they reach and move those whom no other good influences affect and conquer such as have resisted all other powers of grace.

Bitter and all too frequent are our regrets and repentances, as we recall, per-baps too late for aught but regret and repentance, the unkind things said or done by us, or the kind things we might and should have said and done, but left unsaid and undone. In our cups of recollection overflowing with divine tender mercies and loving kindnesses there is no bitterer ingredient than this. But seldom, if ever, do we recall any error of ours on the part of kindness or find any occasion for regretting merciful allowances, favorable interpretations or whatever a spirit of kindness may have prompted. We have never stood by a coffin or a grave and repented of any utmost or even unrequited kindness shown

The Gospel of Christ is precious because it is a gospel of the "exceeding great kind-ness of God toward us" in Christ, and because it is all the while aiming to touch and waken the chords of human sympathy in our hearts; and, in bringing us under the law and into the spirit of brotherly kind-ness, to make us know and rejoice together in the loving kindness of our God. Of this gospel we can all be ministers, and the best and most useful portion of our lives our 'little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love.

EARN PRACTICAL THINGS.

Or. Talmage Preaches Directly For the Benefit of the Women.

TEXT: "Every wise woman buildeth her house."-Prov. xiv., 1.

Woman a mere adjunct to man, an appendix to the masculine volume, an appen-dage, a sort of afterthought, something thrown in to make things even that is the heresy entertained and implied by some men. This is evident to them, because Adam was first created, and then Eve. They don't read the whole story, or they would find that the porpoise and the bear and the hawk were created before Adam, so that this argument, drawn from priority of creation, might prove that the sheep and the dog were greater than man. No. Woman was an independent creation, and was intended, if she choose, to live alone, to work alone, act alone, think alone, but never fight her battles alone. The Bible says it is not good for a woman to be alone; and the simple fact is that m.ny women who are harnessed for life in the marriage relation would be a thousand-fold better off if they were alone. A woman standing outside the marriage relation is several hundred thousand times better off than a woman badly married. Many an attractive woman, of good sound sense in other things, has married a man to reform him. What was the result? Like when a dove, noticing that a vulture was rapacious and cruel, set about to reform it, rapacious and cruel, set about to reform it, and said: "I have a mild disposition, and I like peace, and was brought up in the quiet of a dove-cot, and I will bring the vulture to the same liking by marrying him," se, one day, after the vulture decinred he would give up his carnivorous habits and cease longing for blood of flock and herd, at an aitar of rock covered with moss and lichen, the twain were married, a bald-headed sagle officiating, the vulture saying: "With all my dominion of earth and sky, I thee endow, and premise to saying: "With all my dominion of earth estate and the Stanford estate, with other and sky, I thee endow, and premise to tracts in smaller quantities.

ove and cherish till death do us part." But one day the dove in her fright saw the vulture busy at a carcass, and cried: "Stop that! Did you not promise me that you would quityour carnivorous and filthy habits if I married you?" "Yes," said the vulture, "but if you don't like my way, you can leave," and with one angry stroke of the beak, and another flerce clutch, the vulture left the dove eyeless and wingless and lifeless. Many a woman who has had the hand of a young inebriate offered, but declined it, or who was asked to chain her life to a man selfish, or of bad temper, and refused the shackles, will bless God throughout all eternity that she escaped that earthly pan-

In addressing those women who have to battle alone, I congratulate you on your happy escape. Rejoice forever that you will not have to navigate the faults of the other sex, when you have faults enough of your own. Think of the bereavements you avoid, of the risks of unassimilated temper which you will not have to run of the cares you will never have to carry, and of the opportunity of outside useful-ness from which married life would have partially debarred you, and that you are free to go and come as one who has the responsibilities of a household can seldom God has not given you a hard lot, as compared with your sisters. When young women shall make up their minds at the start that masculine companionship is not a necessity in order to happiness, and that external grace of character or a useful there is a strong probability that they will lubricant wherewith to reduce the frictions have to fight the battle of life alone, they will be getting the timber ready for their own fortune, and their saw and ax and plane sharpened for its construction, since "Every wise woman buildeth her

> As no boy ought to be brought up without learning some business at which he could earn a livelihood, so no girl ought to be brought up without learning the science of self-support. The difficulty is that many a family goes sailing on the high tide of success, and the husband and father deends on his own health and acumen for the welfare of his household, but one day he gets his feet wet, and in three days pneumonia has closed his life, and the daughters are turned out on a cold world to earn bread, and there is nothing practi-cal that they can do.

How is this evil to be cured? Start clear back in the homestead and teach your daughters that life is an earnest thing, and that there is a possibility, if not a strong probability, that they will have to light the battle of life alone. Let every father and mother say to their daughters: "Now, what would you do for a livelihood if what I now own were swept away by financial disaster, or old age, or death should end my career?"

My advice to all girls and all unmarried women, whother in affluent homes or in homes where most stringent economies are grinding, is to learn to do some kind of work that the world must have while the

O, young women of imerical as many of you will have to fight your own battles alone, do not wait until you meet with disaster and your father is dead, and all the resources of your family have been scattered; but now, while in a good house and environed by all prosperities, learn how to do some kind of work that the world must have as long as the world stands. Turn your attention from the embroidery of fine slippers, of which there tions these signs become manifest and the a surplus, and make a useful shoe. Expend the time in which you adorn a elgar case in learning how to make a good, honest loaf of bread. Turn your atten-tion from the making of flimsy nothings to the manufacturing of important somethings.

"But," you ask, "what would my father and mother say if they saw I was doing such upfashionable work?" Throw the whole responsibility upon us, the pastors, who are constantly hearing of young women in all these cities, who, unqualified by starvation and damention. They go along the street at 7 o'clock in the wintry mornings, through the slush and storm, to the place where they shall earn only ough for subsistence, the daughters of once prosperous merchants, law-yers, clergymen, artists, bankers and capitalists, who brought up their chil-dren under the infernal delusion that it was not high tone for a woman to learn a profitable calling. Young woman! take this affair in your own hand, and let there be an insurrection in all prosperous families on the part of the daugnters of this day, demanding knowledge in occupation and styles of pusiness by which they may be their own defence and their own support if all fatherly and bushandly and brotherly hands fail them. I have seen two sad sights, the one a woman in all the giory of her young life, stricken by disease, and in a week lifeless in a home of which see had been the pride. As her hands were folded over the still heart and her eyes closed for the last slumber, and she was taken out amid the lamentations of kindred and friends, I thought that was a sadness immeasurable. But I have seen something compared with which that seene was bright and songful. It was a young woman who had been all her days amid wealthy surroundings, by the visit of death and bankruptey to the household turned out on a cold world without one lesson about how to get food or shelter, and into the awful whirlpool of city life, where strong ships have gone down, and for twenty years not one word has been heard from her. Vessels went out on the Atlantic Ocean looking for a shipwrecked craft that was left alone and forsaken on the sea a few weeks before, with the idea of bringing it into port. But who shall ever bring into the harbor of peace and hope and heaven that lost womaniy immortal, driven in what tempest, afiame in what conflagration, sinking into what abyss? O God, help! O Christ, rescue! My sisters, give not your time to learning cy work which the world may dispense with in hard times, but connect your skill with the indispensables of life. Let me say to all women who have already entered upon the battle of life that the time is coming when women shall not only get as much salary and wages as men get, but for certain styles of empl women will have higher salary and more wages, for the reason that for some styles of work they have more adaptation. this justice will come to women not through any sentiment of gallantry, not because woman is physically weaker than men, and, therefore, ought to have more consideration shown her, but because through her finer natural taste and more grace of manner and quicker perception, and more delicate touch, and more educated advoitness she will, in certain callings, be to her employer worth ten per cent. more, or twenty per cent. more than the other sex. She will not get it by asking for it, but by earning it, and it shall be hers by lawful

Several years ago we had a serious time with my daughter, which began when she was about sixyears old. She did not have any seri ous filness but seemed to gradually waste away. Having never had any consumption in our family, as we come of good old Irish and Scotch stock, we did not think it was that. Our doctor called the disease by an odd name, which, as I afterward learned, meant lack of blood.

NOVEL TIME SIGNAL Intended to Replace and Improve Upon the Block System.

The most disastrous wrecks known to modern railroading are most frequently occasioned by rear-end collisons. A train may be running fifteen or twenty miles an hour, while one following is making thirty-five or more, the engineer of the rear train knowing nothing of the one preceeding. The former is sure to be overtaken, and if no warning is given, or if there is a curve in the road or a fog in the air, smash-up is inevitable.

Mr. John L. Allen, at present an operator in the employ of the Louisvilla and Nashville Railroad, at Loretto, Ky., has, it is believed, solved the problem of the prevention of rear-end collisions.

By means of an ingenius device on which he has been granted letters patent, an engineer can always know when he is dangerously near a train preceding him, and trains may follow each other only a few minutes apart, without fear of a collision. This railway time signal flashes a warning signal in the face of the engineer, enabling him to determine the location of the train preceding him, and he can thus keep his engine under necessary control or run to the full limit, as the never-falling clock hands of the signals may instruct him. A train passes over the track bar, releasing the hands of the signal, and they drop to starting point, commencing at once to register the minutes elapsing since the passage of the train. Three minutes later, perhaps, another train thunders up the track. A glance at the signal tells the engineer that he is dangerously near to the train shead and he slows down accordingly, ready to stop should the other train be sighted. A few miles further another signal informs the engineer as to how the train ahead is progressing, and he can correspondingly increase his speed or still further check it, as may be required, thus enabiling trains to be run only a few minutes apart without danger. Mr. Allen told the story of his invention as follows: "The clock has only five wheels and very little of anything else. The track connection is very simple in construction. These signals will replace many block systems less reliable and more expensive. One winding up of the clock will run it for 800 trains. There is no jar to the clock from a train passing over the track bar. The bar is moved only half an inch by the tread of wheels. When the wheels pass over this bar the clock hands are released and they drop back to the starting point. When the last wheel passes over the clock moves and carries the hands to fifteen minutes and stops, unless another train passes before. The dials are lettered in a three-fourths circle, so as to obviate confusion in locating the hands. The dials are two feet square and the hands fourteen inches long. As an engineer remarked, all a man would want is a glance and he is shown exactly the time since a train passed that point if less than fifteen minutes. In many places the signals can be used without being lighted, the dlals being large enough to be plainly seen some distance by the light from the headlight. A lamp is provided inside and can be
