England's Ancient Wheat Fields. "The wheat fields of England are the oldest national industries in the country," says a recent English writer. "A wheat field a thousand years old is quite a common sight in this country. Of course it has not grown a crop of corn every year in the ten centuries, but during that long sequence of ages, in the fixed and abiding order of this ancient country, that particular area of land has been cultivated, with the production of wheat as its main object, and it has remained as part of the English granary from the days of Edward the Confessor until those of Victoria. Many of the wheat fields are far more ancient than this, but the record of Doomsday Book is a practical voucher for a period of 1,000 years. The custom of the Saxon cultivators, and the evidence of local names are proof of a still greater antiquity of cultivation on some of the best corn land; and beyond the days of the Saxons lie the last two centuries of Roman occupation, when England was the great wheat glowing country of the west, and sur Lied the population of Rome with daily bread. Perhaps the most interesting feature, of our ancestral corn lands is the small degree in which their appearance can have changed in course of ten or twelve centuries. Their area is much greater than in the old times, when villages were separated by wide woodlands, and only grouped and contiguous in naturally open country. The early Saxon times were not days in which men cared to lay field to field. There was plenty of ground available, and of this

A missionary at Tung Chow has invented a Chinese typewriting machine. The characters number about four thousand, and are on the edge of wheels about a foot in diameter. Twenty or thirty wheels are required to carry all the characters, and two keys must be struck to make an impression. The first turns the wheel, and the second stops it at the required letter, which is then brought down to the paper. The machine is complicated, but the inventor (Dr. Sheffield) hopes to make it more simple. There are 18,000 characters in the Chinese language, each representing a distinct word. The 4,000 in common use have been selected for the new Silence in Heaven," the Subject-The Mighty Import of the Cessation De scribed in Revelations-Half Kours Which Have Determined Destinies.

TEXT: "There was slience in heaven about the space of half an hour."-Revelations, viii., 1.

"Take this watch and keep it," said a dring Christian as he picked it up from the stand at his pillow, "I have no more need of it. I am going where time shall be no longer." But it seems from my text that heaven was at least once measured by an earthly time-piece.

The busiest place in the universe is heaven. It is the center from which all good influences start; it is the goal at which all good results arrive. The Bible represents it as active, with wheels and wings and orchestras and processions, mounted or charioted. But my text describes a space when the wheels ceased to roll and the trumpets to sound and the voices to chant. The riders on the white horses reined in their chargers. The doxologies were hushed and the processions halted. The hand of arrest was put upon all the splendors. "Stop, Heaven!" cried an omnipotent voice, and it stopped. For thirty minutes everything celestial stood still. "There was silence in heaven for the space of half an hour.' From all we can learn it is the only time heaven ever stopped. It does not stop, as other cities, for the night, for there is no night there. It does not stop for a plague, for the inhabitant never says, "I am sick." It does not stop for bankruptcies, sick." It does not stop for bankruptcies, for its inhabitants never fail. It does not for impassable streets, for there are fallen snows or sweeping freshets. What, then, stopped it for thirty minutes? Grotius and Professor Stuart think it was at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem. Mr. Lord thinks it was in the year 311, near the close of the Diocletian persecution and the beginning of the wars by which Constantine gained the throne. But that was all a guess, though a learned and brilliant guess. I do not know when it was, and I do not care when it was, but of the fact that such an interregnum of sound took place I am certain. silence in heaven for the space of half an hour.

And, first of all, we may learn that God and all heaven then honored silence. full power of silence many of us have vet to learn. We are told that when Christ was arraigned "He answered not a word." That silence was louder than any thunder that ever shook the world. Ofttimes, when are assailed and misrepresented, the mightiest thing to say is to say nothing, and the mightiest thing to do is to do nothing. Those people who are always rushing into print to get themselves set right, accomplish nothing but their own chagrin. Silence! Do right and leave the results with God. Among the grandest lessons the world has ever learned are the lessons of patience taught by those who endured uncomplainingly personal or domestic or political injustice. Oh, the power of patient silence! Eschylus, the immortal poet, was condemned to death for writing something that offended the people. All the pleas in his behalf were of no avail, until his brother uncovered the arm of the prisoner and showed that his wrist had been sacrificed for his country at the battle That silent plea liberated him. The loudest thing on earth is silence if it be of the right kind and at the right time. There was a quaint old hymn, spelled in the old style, once sung in the

That shoot with the longest gun. My friends, the tossing sea of Galilee seemed more to offend Christ by the amount of noise it made, for He said to it: "Be of noise it made, for He said to it: atill!" yet heaven never stopped a moment for any such occurrence, but it stopped thirty minutes for the coronation of Silence.

There have been events on earth and in heaven that seemed to demand a whole day or whole week or whole car for celestial consideration. If Grant the Cross, the Waterloo medal. In your first mand a whole day or whole week or whole year for celestial consideration. If Grotius was right and this stience occurred at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, that seene was so awful and so prolonged that all the royal house of heaven and receive the inhabitants of heaven could not have done justice to it in many weeks. After victor over political misfortune, as victor fearful besiegement of the two fortresses of over the droughts and freshets of the farm fearful besiegement of the two fortresses of over the droughts and freshets of the farm Jerusalem — Antonio and Hippicus—had neld, victor over the temptations of the been going on for a long while, a Roman soldier mounted on the shoulder of another soldier burled into the window of the temple a 'firebrand, and the temple was all over the storehouse, victor over home and after covering many specifies. affame, and after covering many sacrifices to the holiness of God, the building itself became a sacrifice to the rage of man. The some outlaws were passing a doorway and the presence of all the galleries, saintly, inhaled the odors of food they burst open angelic, and divine, while all heaven the door, threatening the mother of the household with death unless she gave them some food, and she took them aside washed and showed them that it was her own child Lamb." she was cooking for the ghastly repast. Six hundred priests were destroyed on Mount Zion because, the temple being gone, there was nothing for them to do. Six thousand people in one cloister were consumed. There were 1,100,000 dead, according to Josephus. Grotius thinks that this was the cause of silence in heaven for half an hour. If Mr. Lord was right and this will an form the march? If heaven is all this while silent, what will it be when in full triumph? Many case is all this while halted, what cause of silence in heaven for half an hour. If Mr. Lord was right, and this silence was during the Diocletian persecutions, by which 844.000 Christians suffered death from sword and fire, and banishment and exposure, why did not heaven listen throughout at least one of those awful years? No! Thirty minutes! The fact is that the celestial programme is so crowded with spectacle that it can afford only one recess in all eternity, and that for a short gan taking it I was all run down, felttired and sleepy most of the time.

With spectacle that it can allord only one recess in all eternity, and that for a short of God and the Lamb, and Christ shall run space. While there are great chorouses in which all heaven can join, each soul there has a story of divine mercy peculiar to it bas a story of divine mercy peculiar to it will be like the voice of many waters and it will be like the voice of many waters and it will be like the voice of many waters and the west, and sit down in the temple of God and the Lamb, and Christ shall run the demple of God and the Lamb, and the west, and sit down in the temple of God and the Lamb, and Christ shall run the demple of God and the Lamb, and Christ shall run the demple of God and the Lamb, and Christ shall run the demple of God and the Lamb, and Christ shall run the demple of God and the Lamb, and christ shall run the demple of God and the Lamb, and Christ shall run the demple of God an get through with all its solos, as well as had pains in all its recitatives, with all its cantatas, my back and with all its grand marches, with all its vic-

Not only what we now know of God, but what we will know of Him after everlasting study of the Deifle. If my text had said there was silence in heaven for nights. I al-thirty days, I would not have been startled at the announcement, but it indicates thirtyminutes. Why, there will be so many friends to hunt up; so many of the greatly good and useful that we will want to see; so many of the unscrutable things of earth we will need explained; so many exciting earthly experiences we will want to talk over, and all the other spirits and the ages will want the same, that there will be no will want the same, that there will be no opportunity for essation. How busy we will be kept in having pointed out to us the heroes and heroines that the world never fully appreciated—the yellow fever and cholera doctors, who died not flying from their posts; the female nurses who faced pestilence in the lazarettoes; the railroad engineers who stayed at their places in order to save the train though they them. der to save the train, though they them-seives perished and went down through more half hours to spare. Besides that, heaven is full of children. They are in the vast majority. No child on earth who amounts to anything can be kept quiet half an hour, and how are you going keep 500,000,000 of them quiet half an our. You know heaven is much more of a Dur. place than it was when that recess of thirty minutes occurred. Its population has quadrupled, sextupled, centupled. Heaven has more on hand, more of rapture, more of knowledge, more of intercommunica-tion, more of worship. There is not so much difference between Washington, a mudhole seventy years ago, and Washington now, the most benatiful city on earth; not so much difference between New York when Canal street was far uptown, and when Canal street is far downtown, as there is difference between what heaven was when my text was written and what heaven is now. The most thrilling place we have ever been in is stupid compared with that, and if we now have no time to spare, we will then have no eternity to spare. Silence in heaven only half an hour!

My subject also impresses me with the immortality of a half hour. That half hour mentioned in my text is more widely known than any other period in the calendar of heaven. None of the whole nours of heaven are measured off, none of the years, none of the centuries. millions of ages past, and the millions of ages to come, not one is especially measured off in the Bible. The half hour of my text is made immortal. The only part of eternity that was ever measured by earthly timepiece was measured by minute hand of my text. Ou, the half hours! They decide everything. I am not asking what you will do with the years or months or days of your life, but what of the half hours. Tell me the history of of the balf hours. your half hours, and I will tell you the story of your whole life on earth and the story of your whole life in eternity. The right or wrong things you can think in thirty minutes, the right or wrong things you can say in thirty minutes, the right or wrong things you can do in thirty minutes are glorious or baleful, inspiring or desper-

Look out for the fragments of time. They are pieces of eternity. It was the half hours between shoeing horses that made Elihu Burritt the learned blacksmith; the half hours between professional calls as a physicial that made Abercrombie the Christian philosopher; the half hours between his duties as school master that made Salmon P. Chase Chief Justice; the half hours between shoe lasts that made Henry Wilson Vice-President of the United States; the half hours between canal boats that made James A. Garfield President. The half hour a day for good books or bad books; the balf hour a day for prayer or indolence; the half hour a day for helping others or blasting others; the half hour pefore you go to business, and the half hour after your return from business: that makes the difference between the scholar and the ignoramus, between the Christian and the infidel, between the saint and the demon, between triumph and catastrophe, between heaven and hell. The most trenendous things of your life and mine were certain half hours.

Remember, we are mortal yet, and cannot endure the full roll of heavenly haronies, and cannot endure even the sil heaven for more than half an hour. Hark! strike, and the half hour is ended. De-scend! Come back! Come down! till your work is done. Shoulder a little longer your oattles. Weep a little longer your griefs. And then take heaven not in its fullest half our, but in its mightiest pomp and instead of taking it for thirty minutes, take it world

Heaven has been crowning Kings made it possible for you to get there at all, and Queens unto God for many centuries. I think the rest of your first half bour in ictures of the medals struck by the Engish Government in honor of great battles; half hour in heaven in some way you will worriments, victor over physical distress, victor over bereditary depressions, victor over sin and death and hell. Take the angelic, and divine, while all heaven chants: "These are they who came out of great tribulation and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Thy saints in all this glorious war tailed plan, and writes it down carefully. He fixes this in his head, and lets it "seethe and ferment" there, as he says. When ready to begin work, he divides his time, not into days, but weeks. During the first week he produces a certain amount, the second week a simflar amount, and so on, week after week. He writes without correction, and never copies, producing just one manuscript-the one which he sends to the printer. Each week's work continues that of the preceding week. Though the plan of the book is elaborated care, fully in advance, this plan is not followed strictly; from the "seething and fermenting" in his head changes are suggested to the author, and he makes them. He has no secretary, amanuensis, copyist, or assistant.

To write such books as he does with out copying or correcting, to create works like the trilogy and "Quo Vadis?" by a series of efforts, each one of which gives a finished part, and each part being a seamless and flawless continuation of the preceding, till the last, together with all the others, forms a complete, unbroken whole, is perhaps the most amazing tour de ferce in literary experience. Sienkiewicz employs no man or woman to help him. He makes all literary researches himself; visits and studies the places which he needs to see; and when writing in Switzerland, Italy, France, or other countries, takes with him all the books he requires, and shuts himself in with them during working hours, which for him are from eight or nine till lunch at one o'clock, and then a couple of hours later on. He never writes after dinner in the evening, and has so ordered his "works and days" that he needs no assistance. -Century.

Capt. Isaiah H. Grant, keeper of the United States lighthouse department storehouse on Central Wharf, recalls an interesting anecdote that is particularly appropriate at this time, and goes to show the stuff of which the American navy is composed. / Captain Grant is a brother of William G. Grant, the keeper of the light on Matinicus Rock, and of the later tells this story:

It was back in 1864, and Commodore Dewey was then executive officer on board the United States vessel Colorado. William Grant was a seaman on the same ship, and is naturally well posted as to our gallant commodore's fighting qualities. The Colorado was steaming into Hampton Roads, Va., towing a large boatload of sallors, relates the Portland (Me.) Express.

It was a windy day and the waves were running high. In some manner the boat capsized, and in a moment every one was struggling in the water. All but one, however, succeeded in getting on its bottom. One sailor who could not swim sank to the bottom. A boat was at once lowered from the Colorado, William Grant being one of the men assigned to it.

The men rowed with a will, and soon reached the overturned boat and the sailors clinging to its bottom. They had so much headway that the boat shot over the place where the unfortunate went down. Mr. Grant was in the bow keeping a sharp lookout for him when he came to the surface. As the boat moved along he looked down into the water, which was clear, and plainly saw the man near the surface. Like a flash, he scrambled to the stern of the boat, and, without hesitating a second, dived over the coxswain's head for the drowning man. He calculated just right, and in a moment had him by the collar and succeeded in bringing him to the surface. Both men were taken into the boat, and after hard work the half-drowned sailor was revived. He owed his life to Mr. Grant's bravery

The next day Dewey, as executive of ficer, called Mr. Grant up on to the quarterdeck, and before every one thanked him cordially for his bravery in rescuing the sailor.

A few years ago when Dewey, then commodore, visited the Maine coast and called upon Mr. Grant at Matinicus, the incident was recalled, and a long talk was enjoyed by the men. Commodore Dewey recalled the matter instantly and again complimented Mr.
