THE EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: "People of Many Troubles"-A Certain Amount of Persecution and Tribulation Arouses the Best That is ina Man-Woman in a Crisis.

Text: "There was a sharp rock on the ne side, and a sharp rock on the other.' I Sam. xiv., 4.

The cruel army of the Philistines must be taken and scattered. There is just one man, accompanied by his bodyguard, to scene. I know that David cracked the skull of the giant with a few pebbles well slung, and that three bundred Gideonites scattered ten thousand Amalekites by the crash of broken crockery; but here is a more wonderful conflict. Yonder are the were as famous in olden times as in modern times are Plymouth Rock and Gibraltar. They were precipitous, unscalable and sharp. Between these two rocks Jonathan The day comes for must make his ascent. the scaling of the height. Jonathan, on his hands and feet, begins the ascent. With strain and slip and bruise, I suppose, one side. Seneh on the other. After a sharp tug, and push, and clinging, I see the head God of Jonathan above the hole in the mountain, and there is a challenge and a fight, and a supernatural consternation. two men. Jonathar, and his bodyguard, tor, drive back and drive down the Philistines some over the rocks, and open a campaign which molishes the enemies of Israel. pose that the overhanging and overshad-owing rocks on either side did not balk or dishearten Jonathan or his bodyguard, but only roused and filled them withenthusiasm as they went up. "There was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side." My friends you have been, or are now, some of you, in this crisis of the text, II a man meets one trouble he can go through He gathers all his energies, centrates them on one point, and in the strength of God, or by his own natural determination, goes through it. Butthe man who has trouble to the right of him, and trouble to the left of him, is to be pitled. Did either trouble come alone, he might endure it, but two troubles, two disasters, two overshadowing misfortunes, are Bozez and Seneh. God pity him! "There is a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side."

In this crisis of the text is that man whose fortune and health fall him at the same time. Nine-tenths of all our merchants capsize in business beforethey come to forty-five years of age. There is some ision in commercial circles, and they before he learns what a fool a man is who risks all his own property on the prospect that some man will tell the truth. It seems learns how much easier it is to buy than to It seems as if every man must be completely burned out before he learns the imortance of always keeping fully insured. It seems as if every man must be wrecked in financial tempest before he learns to keep things snug in case of a sudden euro-

When the calamity does come, it is wful. The man goes home in despair, and he tells his family. "We'll have to go to the poor-house." He takes a dolorous view of everything. It seems as if he never But a little time passes, and could rise. he says, "Why. I am not so badly off after all: I have my family left."

"Oh." you say, "that only increases the embar-rassment, since you have her also to take woman as often supports the man as the man supports the woman. The man may bring all the dollars, but the woman generally brings the courage and the faith in them upon their miserable way.

and compassionate God, through all eternity you will bless Him that in this world "there was a sharp rock on the one side,"

Again, that man is in the crisis of the text who has home troubles and outside persecution at the same time. The world treats a man well just as long as it pays to treat him well. As long as it can manufacture success out of his bone and brain and muscle, it favors him. The world fattens the horse it wants to drive. But let a man see it is his duty to cross the track of the world, then every bush is full of horns and tusks thrust at him. They will belittle him. They will call his generosity self-aggrandizement and his picty sanctimoniousness. The very worst persecution will sometimes come upon him from those who profess to be Christians.

John Milton-great and good John Milton—so far forgot himself as to pray, in so many words, that his enemies might be ternally thrown down into the darkest and deepe t gulf of Hell, and be the undermost and most dejected, and the lowest down vassals of perdition! And Martin Luther so far forgot himself as to say, in regard to his theological opponents: "Put them in whatever sauce you please, roasted, or fried, or baked, or stewed, or boiled, or hashed, they are nothing but asses!" Ah, ny friends, if John Milton or Martin Luther could come down to such scurrility, what may you not expect from less elevated opponents? Now, a certain amount of persecution rouses a man's defiance, stirs his blood for nagnificent battle, and makes him fifty do that thing. Jonathan is the hero of the times more a manthan he would have been without the persecution. So it was with the great Reformer when he said, "I will not be put down, I will be heard." And so it was with Millard, the preacher, in the time of Louis XI. When Louis XI. sent more wonderful conflict. Young ate the process of the rocks. Here is Jonathan with his bodyguard in the vailey. On the will reach Heaven sooner by water than he will reach Heaven sooner by water than he will reach Heaven sooner by water than he reach it by fast horses." A certain amount of persecution is a tonic and inspiration, but too much of it, and too long continued, becomes the rock Bozez throwing a dark shadow over a man's life. What is he to do then? Go home, you say, Good advice that. That is just the place for a man to go when the world abuses him. There are many homes in which there is but still on and up, first goes Jonathan, no sympathy, and no happiness, and no and then goes his bodyguard. Bozez on good cheer. The clamor of the battle may not have been heard outside; but God knows, notwithstanding all the playing of the "Wedding March," and all the odor of the orange blossoms. and the benediction of the officiating pasthere has been no marriage. sometimes men have awakened to find on one side of them the rock of persecution. and on the other side of them the rock of domestic intelleity. What shall such a one do? Do as Jonathan did-climb. Get up heights of God's consolation, from which you may look down in triumph upon outside persecution and home trouble. While good and great John Wesley was being silenced by the magistrates, and hav ing his name written on the board fences of London in doggerel at that very time his wife was making him as miserable as she could-acting as though she were possessed by the Devil, as I suppose she was; never doing him a kindness until the day she ran away, so that he wrote in his diary these words: "I did not forsake her; I have not dismissed her; I will not re-call her." Planting one foot upon outside persecution, and the other foot on trouble. John Wesley climbed up into the heights of Christian joy, and after preaching forty thousand sermons, and traveling two hundred and seventy thousand miles, reached the heights of Heaven, though in this world he had it hard enough—"a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on Again, that woman stands in the crisis of the text who has bereavement and a strugstop payment. It seems as if every man gle for a livelihood at the same time. With-must put his name on the back of a note out mentioning names, I speak from observation. Ah, it is a hard thing for a woman to make an honest living, even when her heart is not troubled, and she has a fair as if a man must have a large amount of cheek, and the magnetism of an exquisite unsalable goods on his own shelf before he presence. But now the husband, or the father, is dead. The expenses of the obse-quies have absorbed all that was left in the savings bank; and, wan and wasted with weeping and watching, she goes forth—a grave, a hearse, a coffin behind her—to contend for her existence and the existence of her children. When I see such a battle as that open, I shudder at the ghastliness of the spectacle. Men sit with embroidered slippers and write heartless essays about women's wages; but that question is made up of tears and blood, and there is more blood than tears. Oh, give woman free access to all the realms where she can get a livelihood, from the telegraph office to the pulpit! Let men's wages be cut down be-fore hers are cut down. Men have iron in Before the Lord turned Adam out of fore hers are cut down. Men have from in Paradise, He gave him Eve, so that when he lost Paradise he could stand it. Per-way free to her of the broken heart. May God put into my hand the cold, bitter cup il his life, and who has not a lof privation, and give me nothing but a windowless but for shelter for many years, rather than that after I am dead there should go out from my home into the pitiless world a woman's arm to fight the Get. tysburg, the Austerlitz, the Waterloo of life for bread! And yet, how many women there are seated between the rock of bereavement on the one side and the rock of destitution on the other! Bozez and Seneh interlocking their shadows and dropping Well, this man of whom I am speaking looks around, and he finds his family is left, and he rallies and the finds his family is

He sat down for a little while under the grim shadow of the rock Boze; yet he soon rose, and began, like Jonathan, to climb. But how often is it that physical ailment comes with financial embarrassment! When is it that physical ament only with financial embarrassment! When Oh, ye despairing women, seeking in the fortune failed it broke the man's spirit. for work, wandering along the docks, and the fortune failed it broke the man's spirit. for work, wandering along the docks, and the fortune failed it broke the man's spirit. For work, wandering along the docks, and thinking to throw yourselves into the river thinking to throw yourselves into the river. the forume failed it broke the man's spirit. His nerves were shattered. His brain was stunned. I can show you hundreds of men in our cities whose fortune and health failed at the same time. They came prematurely to the staff. Their hand trembled with incipient paralysis. They never saw a well day since the hour when they called their creditors together for a compromise. If such men are impatient, and peculiar, and irritable, excuse them. They had two troublest either one of which down, wringing your hands in despair, you They had two troubles; either one of which they could have met successfully. Not a Temperance Country.

A story was told relating to Scotch hospitality, as explaining Scotland's reputation as a drinking nation. Some years ago a Scotchman residing in the interior, who had accumulated a fortune in America, paid a visit to his old home. Before leaving a fellow countryman asked him to take in his pocket a notebook, and to make a note of every visit he made with an observation as to whether or not he was offered liquor. During a two months' absence he paid ninety-two visits in Scotland and was asked to take liquor at eighty-seven of the houses he visited.

SCHOOLING OUTSIDE SCHOOLS.

Germany's Bands of Tramp Students Have a Good Time, A bicycle tour last July brought to our notice a feature of public education in Germany which might wisely be imitated in this country. We arrived one day at Goslar, on the northern edge of the Harz mountains. The proprietor of our hotel was busy preparing for the coming of sixty boys. They arrived the next evening with their knapsacks, on foot, and accom-Pills for Pale panied by three or four teachers. In the large dining hall, after their bread and beer, brief addresses were made to them and they sang lustily several patriotic and folk songs. They were a lively but orderly company. Next morning they gathered in the public square, near the most ancient historic building in the town. The events of interest which had there transpired were recounted to them, and other songs were sung in praise of the Fatherland. We afterward saw them in various excursions in the neighborhood. Such companies of students were often met with in the Harz and in the Thuringian forest. We learned that these journeys are an important part of school life. The pupils come sometimes from small villages, sometimes from the larger towns. The proposed route is laid out weeks or even months beforehand. The pupils draw maps of the region through which they are to pass. Its features of geographic, historic, literary and geological interest are pointed out to them. They are told what they may expect to see and how to see it.

Usually each pupil makes a weekly contribution toward the cost of the trip till the amount needed is secured. Of course strict economy is practiced and the expense is small. Often they sleep in barns or in large halls, covered with straw. They are instructed as to their outfits, and each boy carries what he requires strapped on his shoulders. They divide into several groups-one group marching as leaders, another bringing up the rear, another acting as scouts, and so on. They study botany, natural history, the roads and how they were made, the raising and moving of crops and many other things. They visit the homes where men famous in war, government or literature have lived. They learn poems assoclated with places. From such a journey, lasting from three days to three weeks, they return to their own communities with many new things of interest to talk about and much valuable information. They write essays on their travels and observations. This outdoor study in Germany is considered important enough to be made the subject of an extended report in a volume just issued by the English education office.
