Julius Hines & Son, the well-known dealers in furniture, carpets, etc., of Baltimore, Md., have issued their new catalogues, which are now ready for delivery, and will be sent free for the asking. The furniture catalogue contains 160 pages, and is replete with everything necessary to make home comfortable and beautiful. Everything faithfully illustrated, so that purchases can be made as easily as though the goods were before you. Prices are such as have made this house famous throughout the length and breadth of this country. The carpet catalogue is really a work of art, being lithographed from handpainted plates, from which carpets can be easily and satisfactorily selected. Designs and colors are faithfully shown, the whole thing making a valuable work of art. In both catalogues are testimonials from satisfied purchasers from every part of the country, together with reference as to reliability and honesty, of which any house might well be proud and which gives absolute assurance of honesty, of which any house might well be proud, and which gives absolute assurance of satisfactory dealings at all times.

been prompt and profuse in extending thanks to officers of the army and navy for deeds of conspicuous bravery in action. No mention, however, has been made thus far of the magnetic act of Captain Sigsbee after the wrecking of his beautiful battleship. A man who went through the ordeal that so suddenly faced him without losing his head or his judgment, is a hero of the first water. His injunction, "Suspena judgment till facts are known," was most potent as calming the outburst of popular indignation. It accomplished more than a presidential proclamation or an act of congress. This single sentence halted and held for many days the criticism of the enlightened world. Are there no thanks left for this remarkably cool-headed officer? He was exonerated from blame for the loss of his ship, and this constitutes his sole recognition.

AN IMPRESSIVE DISCOURSE BY REV. DR. TALMADE,

Honesty Eulogized-Ruinous Modes of Getting Money-Why Politics Has Become a Synonym For Truculency and Turpitude-The Morals of the Gospel. Text: "They that will be rich fall into a temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men

That is the Niagara Falls over which rush a multitude of souls, namely, the determination to have the money anyhow, right or wrong. Tell me how a man gets his money and what he does with it, and I will destiny in this world and the next. I pro-pose to speak to-day about the ruinous modes of getting money.

In all our city, state and national elections large sums of money are used in bribery. Politics, from being the science of good government, has often been begrangled into the symmetry. good government, has often been be-draggled into the synonym for truculency and turpitude. A monster sin, plausible potent, pestiferous, has gone forth to do its dreadful work in all ages. Its two hands are rotten with leprosy. It keeps its right hand hidden in a deep pocket. The left hand is clenched, and with its ichorous knuckle it taps at the door of the court-room, the legislative hall, the congress and the parliament. The door swings open and the monster enters, and glides through the aisle of the council chamber as softly as a slippered page, and then it takes its right hand from its deep pocket, and offers it in salutation to judge or legislator. If that hand be taken, and the palm of the intruder cross the palm of the official, the leprosy crosses from paim to palm in a round blotch, round as a gold eagle, and the virus spreads, and the doom is fixed, and the victim perishes. Let bribery, accursed of God and man, stand up for trial.

The Bible arraigns it again and again.

Samuel says of his two sons, who became judges, "They took bribes and perverted judgment." David says of some of his "Their right hand is full of Amos says of some men in his bribes." Amos says of some men in his day, "They take a bribe, and turn aside the poor in the gate." Eliphaz fortells the crushing blows of God's indignation, declaring, "Fire shall consume the taber-

It is no light temptation. The mightiest have fallen under it. Lord Bacon, Lord Chancellor of England, founder of our modern science, author of "Novum Organum," and a whole library of books, the leading thinker of his century, so precocious that when a little child he was asked by Queen Elizabeth, "How old are you?" he responded, "I am two years younger than your Maajesty's happy reign;" of whose oratory Ben Jonson wrote, "The fear of every man that hear's him was lest be should make an end;" having an income which you would suppose would have put him beyond the temptation of bribery—thirty-six thousand dollars a year, and Twickenham Court, a gift, and princely estates in Hertfordshire—yet under this temptation to bribery, falling flat into ruin, and on his confession of taking bribes, giving as excuse that all his predecessors took them; he was fined two hundred thousand dollars—or what corre-sponds with our two hundred thousand dollars—and imprisoned in London Tower. Even heathenism and the Dark Ages have furnished specimens of incorruptibility. A cadi of Smyrna had a case brought before him on trial. A man gave him five hundred ducats in bribery. The case came on. The briber had many witnesses. The poor man on the other side had no witnesses. At the close of the case the cadi said: "This poor man has no witnesses, he thinks; I shall produce in his behalf ave hundred witnesses against the other side." Then pulling out the bag of ducats from under the ottoman, he dashed it down at the feet of the , saying: "I give my decision against you." Epaminondas offered a bribe, said:

"I will do this thing if it be right, and if it be wrong, all your goods cannot persuade

The President of the American Congress during the American Revolution, General Reed, was offered ten thousand guineas by foreign commissioners if he would betray this country. He replied: "Gentlemen, I am a very poor man, but tell your king he is not rich enough to buy me." But why go so far, when you or I, if we move in honorable society, know men and women who by all the forces of earth and Heil yould not be bribed. zould not be bribed. They would no more be bribed than you wcli. hink tempt-ing an angel of light to exchange Heaven for the pit. To offer a bribe is villiany, but it is a very poor compliment to the man to whom it is offered.

My charge is to you, in all departments of life, steer clear of bribery, all of you. Every man and woman will at some time be tempted to do wrong for compensation. The bribe may not be offered in money. It may be offered in social position. Let us remember that there is a day coming when the most secret transaction of private life, and of public life, will come up

r public reprehension. We cannot bribe death, we cannot bribe sickness, we cannot bribe the grave, we cannot bribe the judgment of that God who thunders against this sin. "Fiel" said Cardinal Beaufort, "de! Can't death be bribed? Is money nothing? Must I die, and so rich? If the owning of the whole reals would save me I could get it whole realm would save me I could get it by policy or by purchase—by money." No, death would not be bribed then; he will not be bribed now. Men of the world often regret that they have to leave their money here when they go away from the world. You can tell from what they say in their last hours that one of their chief sorrows is that they have to leave their in their last hours that one of their chief sorrows is that they have to leave their money. I break that delusion. I tell that bribe-taker that he will take his money with him. God will wrap it up in your shroud, or put it in the palm of your hand in resurrection, and there it will lie, not the coal bright shiping sold. in resurrection, and there it will lie, not the cool, bright, shining gold as it was on the day when you sold your vote and your moral principle, but there it will lie, a hot metal, burning and consuming your hand forever. Or, if there be enough of h for as thain, then it will fall over the wrist, clanking fetters of an eternal captivity. The chain, then it will fall over the wrist, clanking fetters of an eternal captivity. The bribe is an everlasting possession. You take it for time, you take it for eternity. Some day in the next world, when you are longing for sympathy, you will feel on your cheek a kiss. Looking up, you will find it to be Judas, who took thirty pieces of silver as a bribe, and finished the bargain by putting an infamous kiss on the pure cheek of his divine Master.

Another wrong use of money is seen in pure cheek of his divine Master.

Another wrong use of money is seen in the abuse of trust funds. Nearly every man during the course of his life, on a large or smaller scale, has the property of others committed to his keeping. He is so far, a safety deposit, he is an adminktrator, and holds in his hand the interest of the family of a deceased friend. Or he is an attorney, and through his custody goes the payment from debtor to creditor, or he is the collector of a business house, which compensates him for the responsibility; or he is treasurer for a charitable burdens.

Another remark needs to be made, and track, and every style of business is a track, and every day is a track, and every night is a track, and multitudes under the power of temptation where the temptation is mightier than their character. If there be large sums of money to be handled, and the man is not sure of his own integrity, you have no right to run an unseaworthy craft in a hurricane. A mian can tell by the sense of weakness or strength in the presence of a bad opportunity whether he is in a safe place. How many parents make an awful mistake when Cley put their boys in banking houses and stores and shops and factories and places of solemn trust without remedy.

discussing whether they can encure the temptation! You give the boy plenty of money, and have no account of it, and make the way down become very easy, and you may put upon him a pressure that he cannot stand. There are men who go into positions full of temptation, considering only that they are lucrative positions. An abbot wanted to buy a piece of ground, and the owner would not sell it, but the owner finally consented to let it to him until he could raise one crop, and the abbot sowed acorns—a crop of 200 years!

And I tell you young man, that the dishonesties which you plant in your heart and life will seem to be very insignificant, in destruction and perdition."-1 Timothy but they will grow up until they over-shadow you with horrible darkness, overshadow all time and all eternity. It will not be a crop for 200 years, but a crop for everlasting ages.

I address many who have trust funds. tell you his character, and what will be his destiny in this world and the next. I propose to speak to-day about the ruinous modes of getting money.

In all our city, state and national elections large sums of money are used in briblions large sums of money are used in briblions. It is a compliment to you that you have been so entrusted, but I charge you, in the been so entrusted, but I charge you have y separate from your account as trustee of an estate, or trustee of an institution. That is the point at which thousands of people make shipwreck. They get the property of others mixed up own property, they put it into investment, and away it all goes, and they cannot re-turn that which they borrowed. Then comes the explosion, and the money mar-

> A blustering young man arrived at a ho-tel in the West, and he saw a man on the sidewalk whom he supposed to be a labor-er, and in a rough way, as no man has a right to address a laborer, said to him, "Carry this trunk upstairs." The man The man carried the trunk upstairs and came down, and then the young man gave him a quarter of a dollar which was clipped, and in-stead of being twenty-five cents it was worth only twenty cents. Then the young man gave his card to the laborer and said, "You take this up to Governor Grimes; I want to see him." "Ah," said the laborer, "I am Governor Grimes." "Oh," said the young man, "you-I-excuse me." Then the Governor said: "I was much impressed by the letter you wrote me asking for a certain office in my gift, and I had made up my mind you should have it, but a young man who will cheat a laborer out of five cents would swindle the government of the State if he got his hands on it. I don't want you. Good morning, sir."

I do not suppose there was ever a better specimen of honesty than was found in the Duke of Wellington. He marched with hig army over the French frontier, and the army was suffering and he scarcely knew how to get along. Plenty of plunder all about, but he commanded none of the plunder to be taken. He writes home these remarkable words: "We are overwhelmed with debts, and I can scarcely stir out of you are having."—Philadelphia North my house on accout of public creditors, waiting to demand what is due to them." Yes at the very time the French peasantry were bringing their valuables to him to keep. A celebrated writer says of the transaction: "Nothing can be grander or more nobly original than this admission. This old soldier, after thirty years' service, this iron man and victorious general, established in an enemy's country at the head of an immense army, is afraid of his creditors! This is a kind of fear that has seldom troubled conquerors and invaders, and I doubt if the annals of war present anything comparable to its sublime sim-

Oh! is it not high time, that we preach the morals of the Gospel right beside the aith of the Gospel? Mr. Froude, the celsbrated English historian, has written of his own country these remarkable words: From the great house in the city of London to the village grocer, the commercial life of England has been saturated with fraud. So deep has it gone that a strictly honest tradesman can hardly hold his ground against competition. You can no longer trust that any article you buy is the ing which it pretends to be. false weights, false measures, cheating, and shoddy everywhere. And yet the ciergy has seen all this grow up in absolute indif-ference. Many hundreds of sermons have heard in England on the divine mission of ; time to work, the clergy, on bishops, and on justification, and the theory of good works, and verbal inspiration, and the efficacy of the sacraments; but during all these thirty wonderful years, never one that I can recollect on common 24 sesty."

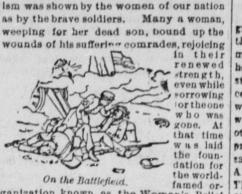

My hearer, what are you doing with that raudulent document in your pocket? other hearer, how are you getting along with that wicked scheme you have now on foot? I that a "pool ticket" you have in your peket? Why, O young man, were you last night practicing in copying your employer's signature? Where were you last night? Are your habits as good as when you left your father's house? You had a Christian ancestry, perhaps, and you have had too many prayers spent on you to go overboard. Dr. Livingstone, the famous explorer, was descended from the High-landers, and he said that one of his ancestors, one of the Highlanders, one day called his family around him. The Highlander was dying; he had his children around his death-bed. He said: "Now, my lads, I have looked all through our history as far back as I can find it, and I have never found a dishonest man in all the line, and I want you to understand you inherit good blood. You have no excuse for doing wrong. My lads, be honest."

Ah, my friends, be honest before God, be honest before your fellow-men, be honest before your soul. If there be those who have wandered away, come back, come home, come now, one and all, come into the Kingdom of God.

I am glad some one has set to music that scene in August, 1831, when a young girl saved from death a whole rail train of passengers. Some of you remember that out West in that year on a stormy night a hur-ricane blew down part of a railroad bridge. A freight train came along and it crashed into the ruin, and the engineer and conwas trestle work, and started to cross amid the thunder and the lightning of the tempest, and the racing of the torrent beneath One misstep and it would have been death. Amid all that horror the lantern went out Crawling sometimes, and sometimes walking over the slippery rails, and over the trestle work, she came to the other side of the river. She wanted to get to the telegraph station, where the express train did not stop, so that the danger might be telegraphed to the station where the train telegraphed to the station where the train did stop. The train was due in a few minutes. She was one mile off from the telegraph station, but for inately the train was late. With out and bruised feet she flew like the wind. Coming up to the telegraph station, panting with almost deadly exhaustion, she had only strength to shout, "The bridge is down!" when she dropped unconscious, and could hardly be resuscitated. The message was sent from that station to the next station, and the train halted, and that night that brave girl saved the lives of hundreds of passengers, and saved many homes from desolation. and saved many homes from desolation. OUR GREAT GRAND-MOTHERS. Clothes They Wore Were Not Comfortable. London Truth: I dare say that our great-grandfathers were delighted with the belongings of our great-grandmothers. But for comfort one would hardly select the eighteenth century straight-laced corset. Above it was a corrage all lined with buckram and whalebone. The hoop-expanded skirt was garlanded with artificial flowers or other fallals. It was hard to sit down properly in it. When once the wearer tat down, she liked to remain seated. A bolt-upright position was obligatory. The hair was expected to remain undisturbed for several days. Hence the necessity, when one retired for the night, to be propped up with pillows. There was really no other way of enjoying a little comfort. The coverlets and pillow cases were considered adjuncts to the bedgown, a most luxurious object for the time. There were bath coverlets of embroidered flannel, for visitors might be received in the bathroom. Fashionable people, under all circumstances, lived in a glass house, unless when at les petits chateaux. The children were early trained to bear ennul and to behave like little stoics. I really do not see the harm. Thus trained, they died "game" on the guillotine. The only woman who made a row was La Dubarry. She was a lowborn person. The snuffbox belonged properly to l'art de la femme. What skill was lavished on it! One showed one's ring in taking a pinch of snuff. The taste for scents was not much developed. How could it be when nostrils were filled with snuff? But I can imagine the snuffbox as being indispensable. Snuff was the only deodorizer. Ladies quite gave it up after the revolution. It was on the wane before. La Nouvelle Heloise did not take snuff,

Beautiful and Fascinating

Woman in Her Prime. Much has been said and written about this beautiful and fascinating woman, but, however great the praises bestowed, they have never, to my mind, been exaggerated, says the Cornhill Magazine. It would be -ssible no doubt, to find more perfectly faultless features, even more beautiful eyes and complexion, but I have never seen the woman who united so many perfections. The creamy luster of the skin, the expression of those tender and sympathetic eyes, the radiant smile, the glorious mass of quite golden bair, the slope of the graceful shoulders, all these charms, enhanced by a toilet as exquisite as Parisian taste could conceive, united to make a perfection that seemed to eclipse and utterly to destroy the beauty of every other woman present, although there were many celebrities of all nations present who were farmed, and justly once tried, you will never be without them the family." But yet the empress was not just now what the French call en beaute, for the event so deeply interesting to France, so important to the imperial pair concerned, was not very far distant, and great care was needed, although the imperial lady herself somewhat pooh-poohed many extra precautions; at any rate, she never allowed herself to show or professed to feel any unusual fatigue.
