Preserving State Forests.

In an address the other day by Forestry Commissioner Rothrock, he announced the purchase of 60,000 acres of forestry reservation by the State.

"The forestry cause in Pennsylvania," declared Dr. Rothrock, "is won. Forty-five thousand acres of this will be in one stretch, pledging a perpetual park to posterity and a new life to the State."

Dr. Rothrock stated that the actual work of the Pennsylvania forester today is threefold. First, to set apart land for forest growth; second, to plant where nature fails to produce a spontaneous growth, and third, to keep the fires from land upon which trees are growing. Harmony with all game protective leagues was advocated. "Despite the common impression," he said, "allow me to assure you that these associations are distinctly humane and helpful to the game itself."

How London Received the Buller News.

When the newsboys, bearing big placards containing the words "Spionkop Abandoned" appeared in the streets of London, the people rushed to buy the papers, and from cabmen on top of hansoms to business men hurrying city-wards, all could be seen scanning the news with dazed expressions. The signs of pleasure which were visible everywhere day before have now given place to a wave of depression, but there have been no outward demonstrations or scenes.

"Forced back," "Shelled out, I suppose," "Great heaven, he's had to go back!" These and similar expressions were heard on all sides, and with downcast countenances the long stream made their way back to the street with deep gloom in their faces.

Cannot Take the Place of a Horse.

The automobile may be a satisfaction, comfort and success to those who want it solely for transportation purposes but in many respects it cannot take the place of a horse. How, for instance, can you dock an automobile's tall, stretch his nose skyward at an angle of forty-five degrees by means of an overhead check rein, yank his mouth sore by a cruel bit, madden it by the brutal cuts of a horse whip, or torture it by any of the other methods by which a certain class of men show that they are lower in the scale of humanity than the horse.—Practical Age.

Oliver T. Corman our energetic produce dealer, says he has orders for all the potatoes he can buy. On Tuesday last he shipped a car load of hay and two car loads of potatoes besides a large amount of butter and no end of eggs, to the coal regions. By close attention to business and fair dealings, Mr. Corman has secured a large trade in that section as well as elsewhere.

A day or two since in passing the residence of W. P. Alexander, head miller in the milling firm of Allison Bros., I noticed in his yard a dozen or more unusually large and healthy looking chickens. Being rather surprised at their plump and shanghai size, I inquired of him what character of "bird" they were, and was informed that they were a cross between the hard Plymouth Rock and buff Cochen. These fowls are certainly worth having, the stock is evidently very superior.

At the banquet given by the Millheim Castle No. 353, Knights of the Golden Eagle on Friday evening last, the following members of Spring Mills Castle were present as guests: John Smith, furniture dealer, and daughter Miss May, Wm. The Republican nominees are, justice of the peace, C. E. Royer, democrat; school directors, J. W. Hazel and James Kennelley; overseer of poor, F. S. Musser; road supervisors, Andrew Corman, Democrat, and John Albright; tax collector, R. D. Musser; auditor, A. Allison; town clerk, J. W. Bair. W. precinct, judge of election, D. H.
