HE NEVER CARRIES A PISTOL.

Because a Duel Taught Him a Serious Lesson.

There is a prominent Baltimorean who now attends church regularly, but who still delights to tell of some of his escapades in early life, says the Baltimore American. "I was a member of a prominent club when I was a young man," he relates, "and in one of our bouts one night I unintentionally insulted a fellow-member. At least I was told the following morning when my senses had returned, that I had insulted the man that he would probably challenge me to fight a duel. Sure enough a challenge came through the ordinary channels and I was advised by my friends to accept or to submit to perpetual disgrace. I accepted and selected pistols. The dueling ground was a spacious yard in the rear of the clubhouse. There we assembled with our seconds and surgeons. Much to my surprise the whole club turned out to witness the affair of honor. I objected to such publicity, but was assured by my friends that it was all right, and I was prevailed upon to face my opponent. I was thoroughly mad and I did not care whether I killed my enemy or half a dozen onlookers. We were placed ten paces apart, with our backs to each other. At the word 'fire' we wheeled and began to pump lead at each other, advancing toward each other at each shot. I emptied two or three chambers of the revolver which had been given me without wounding my opponent. I then threw it away with disgust and pulled my own from my hip pocket. If you ever saw consternation it existed in that backyard for a few minutes. My enemy turned heels and ran into the clubhouse. The spectators scrambled over each other to get out of range. Before I could fire at my retreating foe my second grabbed me and succeeded in disarming me. I was then told that the whole thing was a hoax and that my enemy and myself had been shooting blank cartridges at each other. I did not relish the joke, because I had endured all of the terror which must come to any man who stands up to kill or be killed. That episode was a turning point in my life. I have never carried a pistol from that day to this."

Playmate of the Queen—Pony Farming for Women—The First Woman's College—A Requisite for Spring, etc., etc.

Playmate of the Queen.

Mrs. Middleton, who has just died at Clapham, London, was in her younger days a playmate and attendant of the Queen. The old woman, who had passed her hundredth birthday, was during the early part of the century maid to one of the Queen's ladies in waiting, and had many stories to tell of the Queen's childhood. She was recently the recipient of a substantial gift from her Majesty on the occasion of her birthday.

Pony Farming for Women.

The breeding of ponies is said to be a fascinating business. Two titled women in England have met with much success in this unusual occupation, while several lessers social lights among women have gone into it and won prizes and money as a result of their energy, enterprise and knowledge of horse-flesh. One woman in Devonshire makes a specialty of little Dartmoor ponies, and sells them at high prices. Of late she has devoted her attention to breeding ponies suitable for polo, and many of her sturdy, spirited little horses have distinguished themselves. The titled women stock-farmers are sisters, and the Shetland ponies which come from their farm at Edenbridge, in Kent, are renowned for beauty and breeding. The farm was started as a fad, but has proved a profitable investment. These two ladies are veterinary surgeons and accomplished whips.—Woman's Journal.

The First Woman's College.

In this day of many colleges, opportunities for women to acquire what is called a higher education are so common that the day of small things, when the finishing school, or young ladies' academy, was all that offered the ambitious girl a chance to get a little above her fellows, is well nigh forgotten. Yet it was only in 1836 that the first college for women received its charter, obtained by broad-minded men.

The "Georgia Female College" was placed in Macon. As soon as its being was assured, some young women began to fit themselves for it, and when, in 1838, the college was formally opened, with full faculty, six young women entered, "half-advanced," and graduated in 1840; the first one who did so, a Mrs. Benson, is still living, and when the college celebrated its semi-centennial she gave back her diploma, the first one ever granted a woman in the United States, and it is kept as an interesting document.—Springfield Republican.

A Requisite for Spring.

In making up the dressy spring wardrobe, it will lack completeness without at least one handsome gown of black crepe de Chine, chemise-striped barege, silk-dotted velveteen, or plain black Brussels net over a silk or satin slip, which for the majority of women who are not wealthy is far better when formed of black silk and not a bright contrasting color which soon shows wear. When relief is needed, it can be easily obtained by various additions to the bodice portion of the gown, in the form of guipures, vests, girdles, ribbon choux, etc. Some of the newest black silk veiling or crepe de Chine toilets still show the semi-transparent fabric trimmed with very narrow black satin ribbon gathered through the centre and put on in floral or conventional designs, just as one would follow a pattern in braidwork. Simpler than the style of trimming and quite as fashionable are rows of the narrow chiffon ruching which is sold by the yard. They are arranged on the gown in scallops, or in straight lines, in clusters of three or five.

Women in New Fields.

The first woman to become a member of the law department of Boston is Miss Elizabeth M. Taylor, who has recently been employed at a regular salary by the city. She is a graduate of the Boston University Law School and a member of the Suffolk bar.

Queen Amelia of Portugal, who has qualified as a practicing physician, recently put her knowledge and courage to the test by her attendance on the victims at the plague hospitals. She nursed Dr. Pestana through the last stages of the dread malady to which he had succumbed—a malady more repulsive and more contagious than cholera.

A San Francisco woman who recently performed the marriage ceremony for her daughter said: "This is the first occasion, I believe, of a mother marrying her own daughter. I desire it to be understood by the witnesses present that I have the power and the proper authority to perform the marriage ceremony, as I am an ordained minister under a State charter issued to the Independent Bible Society, of which I am a missionary."

For Women Military Nurses.

Red Cross women who worked during the Spanish-American war have appointed a committee to obtain the passage of a bill by Congress for the establishment of a nursing service in the United States army. The chief features of this bill are the development under efficient supervision of a service consisting of a superintendent, who shall be a graduate of a training school for nurses, and of conspicuous executive ability, and of a corps of carefully chosen graduate nurses, the majority of whom shall be women.

Women nurses in the proportion of not more than 10 per cent. of the number of sick and wounded in general and post hospitals of fifty beds and upwards, the bill provides, shall be employed by, and constitute the women's nursing service, of the Medical Department of the army. The superintendent shall be a woman graduated from a general hospital training school for nurses, appointed by the Secretary of War, at a salary of $2,000 per annum. All the nurses shall be graduates of general hospital training schools, and be appointed by the Surgeon-General, and they shall receive $40 per month when on duty within the limits of the United States, and $50 per month when on duty outside of the limits of the United States. A chief nurse may be appointed for every hospital where there are five or more nurses on duty, at a salary of $75 per month within the limits of the United States and $85 per month outside of the United States. In addition to the salaries above mentioned, the superintendent of nurses and each nurse in the women's nursing service shall be entitled to transportation and necessary expenses when traveling under proper orders.

Symmetry Exercises.

"Unless you already know how to stand correctly let me advise you to spend ten minutes practicing," said Miss Elizabeth MacMartin, a professor of gymnastics. "Begin with feeling your weight evenly balanced upon your feet, though it is not necessary to stand with heels together. Draw your knees in firmly, but do not hold them tensely, draw your hips well back and contract the abdominal muscles. The chest must be thrown out and then the shoulders will drop down and back as they should do. When told to throw your chest out imagine that handle is there, and that you are being pulled forward by it. The next step is to raise the head slightly, and after that draw the chin in. If your body can now sway easily back and forth from the feet up, the posture is correct. Swaying back and forth does not mean to bend at the waist, but to maintain the standing position and imagine that you are a lily swayed back and forth by the wind. The weight of the body is well off the heels, and one is really standing on the balls of the feet. Stand so that a sheet of paper could be slipped under the heels.

"There are certain exercises which will hasten one's ability to stand correctly—separate exercises for the muscles of the back, abdomen and legs. For a weak ankle and flabby calf nothing can be more beneficial than the heel and toe movements. First don low, soft, flexible shoes, without heels. Take correct standing position, only in this case the heels must be together. Rise slowly on the toes as far as possible and keep the position for a second; then lower yourself slowly. Holding the heels together helps to keep the balance. Unless very careful one is apt to turn on the sides of the feet, which must not be allowed for a moment. Try this movement for ten or fifteen times. The following day there will probably be a distinct feeling of soreness; then you will know that you really are doing something. In rising on the heels start with the heels together, and then rise first on one heel and then on the other. The movements are made with some force or impetus and not as slowly as those of the back of the leg, and both heels at once, which is a rather difficult matter. These movements strengthen the muscles of the front of the leg, while these movements strengthen those of the back of the leg, and both should be practiced daily."

Easy Way of Getting a Living.

"I don't know of a more genteel and easy way of getting a living than has been adopted by some of the women of the exclusive set, who are a bit improvident, and who cannot keep up with the procession from their private income, than the book boomer," said one of the men "in the swim," just after bowing to a lady of the fashionable world as she moved through the main corridor at the Waldorf. "She is one of them. She is a very good talker, a graduate of Bryn Mawr, if I am not mistaken, and is so thoroughly well educated that she is looked upon as an authority on all sorts of things that are not essentially fashionable, that is as to dress. She is an amateur as to literature and art, and I happen to know that she has connection with a couple of publishing houses and with one art auction firm, from which she derives a very pretty penny. Her duties are only to recommend certain books and pictures that her employers may wish to find purchasers for. The average man and woman of fashion and money know little about these matters and they readily take her suggestions as to what it is best to read and what artists it is best to patronize in order to be quite up to date. That woman makes the suggestions at dinners and afternoon teas and all sorts of functions, where she is a welcome guest, and she does it so cleverly that no one suspects that she is a boomer of the books and pictures of which she advises the purchase. She is as much of a success in her way as the wine boomers of the other sex are in theirs, and they say that her salaries and commissions are something that is well worth while. They say there is one very fashionable woman who gets about with the smart set who draws a salary from a prominent wine firm, but I am not so sure as to that. I do know about the other one, however." —New York Times.

THE BLACK WALNUT.

Out of Fashion in This Country, but Europe Is Eager For It.

The great size often reached by this tree, the richness of the dark-brown wood, the unique beauty of the grain, sometimes found in burks, knots, feathers, and in the curl of the roots, all conspire to make this the most choice and high-priced of all our native woods says a writer in the Berea Quarterly.

Twenty-five years ago walnut was extensively used in the manufacture of fine furniture and finishings in this country, but manufacturers adroitly drew attention to the beauty of darkly stained quartered oak, and the use of the rarer wood has greatly declined. But all this time the search for the black walnut logs has gone on systematically, thought quietly, the trade attracting little attention, though the volume of lumber handled has been large. Though found to some extent in the Atlantic States from Massachusetts southward, the great source of supply has been the central portions of the Mississippi valley. The walnut is at home in the rich alluvial bottom lands of the Western streams and in the stony limestone soils of the hills and mountains, and in such localities the layers have left few trees unsurveyed. Throughout Eastern Kansas, Missouri and Arkansas, as well as the States along the Ohio and its tributaries, may be seen a few logs at this little station, a car or two at that, with carefully hewn sides and painted ends, ready for the market.

If you ask where the market is you will find that the great bulk of this rare lumber goes to Europe. While we have been led into an enthusiastic admiration for fine oak, stained according to the degree of antiquity it is supposed to represent, our European consuls have been paying fancy prices for the rich black walnut that we have allowed to go "out of fashion."

Where the Canada Goose Breeds.

The breeding place of the Canada goose is in the neighborhood of Hudson Bay and in northern Labrador and Newfoundland. It is the favorite dish of the Indians of these districts, and its advent is a joyful occurrence for the Montagnais and Nasquapes who winter in the far interior of the Labrador peninsula. When caribou, partridges and fish fail, there is little left for them until the geese come. Indeed, throughout British North America the advent of the geese is honored and welcomed in many different ways. One of the Indian names of a month means "the moon when the geese lays her eggs."

The goose dance is a time-honored custom among the Crees of the Saskatchewan; and similar rejoicing and ceremonies existed among the Montagnais and Nasquapes prior to their conversion to Christianity. On the coast of Hudson Bay, the coming of the geese is watched for with the greatest anxiety. When the long and dreary winter has fully expended itself, and the willow grouse have taken their departure for more southern regions, there is frequently a period of starvation to many of the natives, who are generally at that time moving from their wintering grounds to the trading posts.

The first note, therefore, of the large, gray, Canada goose is listened to with a rapture known only to those who have endured great privations and gnawing hunger. It was computed that 74,000 geese are killed annually by the Indians of Hudson Bay, and that not fewer than 1,200,000 leave their breeding grounds by the Hudson Bay line of flight for the South.—Correspondence New York Sun.

Collecting Grandfather's Clocks.

The collecting of old-fashioned high grandfather's clocks, which was a craze a few years ago, brought nearly all of the old pieces of this sort into the possession of the dealers and the collectors and stimulated the counterfeiting of them. Some of these counterfeits are clever enough to deceive the average amateur. The finest collection of old Yankee clocks in New York City is owned by William Curtis Gibson who has spent much money and time in making it. Mr. Gibson began buying Yankee clocks several years ago, and he secured some valuable specimens from antique dealers in this city who did not appreciate them. The cases of some of these old Yankee clocks are as graceful in design and as fine in finish as the best of the old hall clocks. An old New Jersey clock-maker who had been serving a dozen or more Yankee clocks for many years, valuing them at about what the cases were worth for kindling wood, learned a short time ago that collectors were picking up such clocks and he sold all that he owned at prices that seemed to him extravagant. He had taken these clocks in exchange for new metal case clocks and he thought them to be almost worthless. The dealer who bought them sold the clocks for two and three times what he paid for them. —New York Sun.

Sign of Impending Trouble.

"Superstitions!" he exclaimed. "Of course I am superstitious. I sat down to dinner as one of a party of thirteen once on the thirteenth of the month and thirteen courses were served."

"And one of them died?"

"Yes, sir. One of them died."

"How soon after the dinner?"

"Thirteen years after. Oh, I tell you, when thirteen sit down to dinner it's a dead sure sign that somebody is going to die sometime."

My Hair Was Coming Out

"About a year ago my hair was coming out very fast. I bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor to stop this. It not only stopped the falling, but also made my hair grow very rapidly, until now it is 45 inches in length and very thick."—Mrs. A. Boydston, Atchison, Kans., July 25, 1899.

It Feeds the Hair

Have you ever thought why your hair is falling out? It is because you are starving your hair. If this starvation continues your hair will continue to fall.

There is one good hair food. It is Ayer's Hair Vigor. It goes right to the roots of the hair and gives them just the food that they need. The hair stops falling, becomes healthy, and grows thick and long.

Ayer's Hair Vigor will do another thing, also: it always restores color to faded or gray hair.

Dog as a Mail Carrier.

New York Times: A woman called at a house on Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, the other day, bearing a letter addressed to the lady residing there. It had been mailed the day previous, but the address was almost effaced. The woman explained that she had a young collic which was in the habit of picking up and playing with articles he found on the sidewalk. She had been out walking with him when she noticed that he was playing with a letter, which he had evidently found. She took it from him, and finding that it had not been opened, she called at the address and delivered it. It was found about a block away from its address, and had probably been dropped on the sidewalk by a letter carrier. The owner talks of getting a position as mail carrier for her collic.
