HANDS OFF, SAYS CARNEGIE.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie sends to the Associated Press the following statement regarding the situation in the Far East and the relation of the United States to future developments there:

"The refusal of the United States to participate in the attack on the Taku forts makes the Washington Government the natural mediator between China and the European Powers, but America's position may easily be forfeited by agreeing to joint action. The release of Minister Conger and a demand for compensation for injuries incurred are duties incumbent on the Government, but the United States, in my opinion, should take no steps in conjunction with European Powers. I take this view because each of those Powers has seperate interests at heart.

"Great Britain is going to land troops to protect Shanghai, because she looks upon the Yangtse valley as her special province. Russia keeps her chief forces in Manchuria. France is in another region and Germany in a fourth. The first aim of each of these Powers is to safeguard her prospective domains, and if the United States should be drawn into joint action with them the Washington Government may even find itself pledged to go forward into a campaign against China, which would be hopeless, or may ultimately see the Powers at war with each other. To enter upon a contest with 400,000,000 Chinese might prove as disastrous to the United States as a war against a combination of European Powers.

The law says, "Thou shalt not steal a horse," and the punishment is confinement in the penitentiary. The law says, "Thou shalt not form a trust," and the punishment is confinement in the penitentiary." But if a man steals a horse they hound him. with bloodhounds; if he organizes a trust, they give him a banquet .- W. J. Bryan.

BRYAN ON IMPERIALISM.

Col. A. K. McClure, who has had little good to say for the Democratic candidate for the presidency in the Philadelphia Times, speaks very emphatically in referring to Bryans speech to the notifying committee of the Democratic party. Mr. McClure says: "Mr. Bryan's speech appears lengthy but no one who reads beyond the opening paragraphs will put it aside before he has reached the end. It is an exceedingly able speech, coherent and logical and as earnest as eloquent, and and all the more forcible because it is confined closely to one subject, which he takes as the significant leading issue that typifies all the general issues of the campaign.

Whether or not it was politic to devote his speech of acceptance entirely to a discussion of the policy of the administration towards the Philippines may be differently judged according join them at Mifflintown, saying they erations. If any of his supporters are disappointed that he makes no specific reference to any of the financial and economic questions which they deem important, the disappointment of his opponents will be much greater. It will not be so easy as was expected to pick flaws in his speech. Only successful achievement can answer it.

It is, in substance, a broad application of the spirit not only of the Declaration of Independence but of all American history to the present relations of the United States to the territory wrested from the dominion of Spain. While Mr. Bryan has a fondness for rhetorical phrases, this is not mere rhetoric; it is logical argument, with a practical application. It treats its subject with gravity that belongs to it and it will compel many to serious thought who have not hitherto recognized the wide significance of opening paragraphs, concerning the contest between democracy and plutocreaching issue so forcefully to the front, other parts. and the march of events seems to be the campaign."
