FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

A Preliminary Meeting Will be Held Monday Evening, Nov. 12.

All persons interested in the success of the "Farmers' Institute" to be held in Centre Hall, January 11 and 12, are requested to meet in the town council chamber, in the Bank building, Monday evening of next week. Hon. John A. Woodward will be present to assist in arranging the local features of the program. Mr. Woodward, who is the manager of the institutes in this district, has promised, and will fulfil the same, to give the institute at Centre Hall a corps of instructors of the first rank. These institutes afford a splendid opportunity for farmers and others to hear, in a most practical way, the latest and most approved methods of agriculture.

If mechanics or professional men had such an opportunity for instruction in their lines at the expense of the state, Centre Hall would scarcely be able to contain them. Let farmers be as wise and not miss such a golden opportunity to add to their store of knowledge. Come to the preliminary meeting Monday evening of next week.

FROM MICHIGAN.

Francis Fleisher Has a Good Word for the Reporter.

Under date of Nov. 1, Francis Fleisher, of Hinchman, Mich., writes this: "Inclosed find order for one dollar, as pay for the old CENTRE HALL REPORTER. It is our old standby, and would be hard to get along without the old friend. Ever since it changed hands we think the paper lots better. The weather here has been too warm to husk corn, and there is a great deal out yet; it is raining every few days. The wheat fields are looking fine; the abundant crop of apples is about gathered, and cheap, selling for ten cents per bushel to $1.05 per barrel.

Farms Sold.

The farm of Samuel Brown, deceased, near Linden Hall, sold by the administrator, W. B. Mingle, Esq., Saturday, was knocked off to Lloyd Brown, one of the heirs, for $29.95. Mr. Brown has lived on the farm for twenty years and knows the quality of the soil. The purchase is considered one in the buyer's favor.

The Alexander farm bought by Rev. J. M. Rearick passed for $31.30 instead of $32.30 as stated last week. The Alexander and Brown farms join and it will be seen sold for about the same money.

Squire J. S. Houseman, of Colyer, purchased the old Armagast farm recently owned by H. C. Robeson, containing something over one hundred acres.

Business Can be Made.

Every experienced or observing business man can make a fair estimate of the amount of trade in his line that can be worked up in the community in which he may reside. Every legitimate business is capable of a certain measure of development by newspaper advertising, and in a vast majority of cases the profits of the induced traffic will amount to many times the cost of the advertising. It depends on the trader himself what shall be the extent of his business within certain limits.

YOUNG MEN HOME.

Borough Democrats Who Came Home to Vote.—Their Occupation.

A number of young men, all of Democratic faith, during the past year secured positions elsewhere, and came home Tuesday to vote for Bryan and the Democratic county ticket. The young men who go out into the world from Centre Hall and Penns valley may be compared to the Jews of the dispersion. The Jews carried with them the Jewish religion to all parts of the world, and the young men referred to take with them the good Centre county Democratic faith that is indelibly stamped upon them, and the good, political home training of these active youngsters can not help but have a wholesome influence upon their associates. Hence the importance of fathers and political leaders to take care of the boys; instill in them the good Democratic doctrines of our forefathers.

Among others who came home to cast a solid Democratic vote are Messrs. Samuel and Milton M. Snyder, carpenters, employed in the erection of a business block in Clearfield, Pa.

Robert Krumbine, manager of billiard and pool rooms, Washington, D. C.

Edwin Kerlin, who holds an important position at Dixmont Hospital, near Pittsburg.

Alfred W. Nearhood, an assistant at the Dixmont Hospital, Pittsburg, is one of the boys who would go much farther if necessary to cast a Democratic vote. He came home especially to cancel the Republican vote of his chum, Charles Weiler.

Clyde Ayr Smith, in the employment of the Commercial telephone company since the company's organization. He is at present located at Lock Haven.

Arney Lee, with the Pressed Steel Car company, Pittsburg. He has been in the smoky city for some months and holds a good position with the firm mentioned.

James Sandoe, fireman on the Pennsylvania railroad, at Pittsburg, came home, reaching Bellefonte Sunday. Besides making a single X in the Democratic column of the ballot Tuesday, Jim had a lot of fun at the expense of small game.

S. E. Ripka, one of the principals of the Chambersburg Business College, which is being liberally patronized by young men from all over the state, retains Potter township as his voting place. He is a son of A. C. Ripka, of Centre Hill and a strong advocate of Democracy.

The regulations of the authorities at Warren Hospital were not strong enough to hold Edward Riter, who is an attendant at that institution. He is here and voted straight—his accustomed way.

Hoffer Dale, member of the Sophomore class of Pennsylvania State College.

A general invitation is extended to all to be present. A band will likely be present to furnish music for the occasion. The hour for the dedication is 3 p. m.

HUNTING NOTES.

Huntmen in Hot Pursuit of Game.—Luck Good and Bad.

With the opening of the hunting season the sportsman is in hot pursuit of game, and the Reporter furnishes a brief summary of the luck of this craft up to date.

The "Regulars," a hunting party from about Potters Mills, for whom the deer in the Seven mountains have the greatest dread, killed two fine specimens of deer last week. W. H. Lucas and Ralph Smetzler were the men who directed the bullets. The party saw a number of deer in the mountains, and Tuesday started out for a hunt to cover two weeks.

The "Regulars," who have a constitution and by laws consist of Rev. Rhodes, W. M. Grove, James Reish, J. M. Gilliland, D. R. Sweetwood, John Wilkinson, H. F. Musser, S. J. McClintic, W. H. Lucas, A. P. Krape, W. O. Rearick, J. M. Carson.

Thomas Palmer, who is not a member of the party but accompanied them to the mountains, shot a fawn Saturday.

BRADFORD HUNTING PARTY.

The "Bradford" hunting party started to the mountains Tuesday. This party has been regularly chasing and killing deer every year, and the "fleet-foots" make a desperate effort to keep out of rifle range of these gunners. The party consists of Messrs. George Bradford, Frank Bradford, C. W. Slack, Charles Neff, Clyde Bradford, J. Frank Smith, G. L. Bartges, John Kuhn and Henry Homan, all of Centre Hall; Philip Bradford and Josh Page, Linden Hall, and Wm. Kerstetter, of Coburn.

The luckiest hunter reported so far this fall is John Ream, son of George Ream, of Farmers Mills, who killed two large wild turkeys on one shot and a single one at another shot. Aaron Long of same place, also killed a fine turkey, as did also Samuel Kerstetter, of this place.

Deer seem to be plenty in the Seven mountains; two have thus far been shot by nimrods Frank Wingard and Ammon Rote, of Coburn.

BEARDLESS BARLEY.

W. H. Durst Praises the Crop in the Breeders' Gazette.

W. H. Durst, of near this place, a model farmer and student of agricultural topics, wrote the following letter to the Breeders' Gazette:

TO THE GAZETTE.—J. A. McDonald, in your issue of Aug. 15, made a desperate effort to give beardless barley a black eye. Beardless barley is all right with me and many others in Central Pennsylvania. Farming here is devoted to the staple crop—wheat, corn, oats and barley and some rye. Since the beardless barley was introduced some four or five years ago, it has been grown on many farms on which barley had been shunned for years, partly because of the nasty awns, and partly because the soil was not rich enough to give a profitable yield. Beardless barley has become a regular crop with many farmers and it is here to stay. With me it has yielded splendidly every year without the use of fertilizers and has reached as high as forty-three bushels per acre for the whole crop. Other barley never comes up to that figure in this section. The crop ripens right after wheat harvest and usually can be cut as soon as the wheat is off. It is a pleasant crop to handle and in my opinion, which is shared in by all who have given beardless barley a trial, it is far more profitable than the old variety.
