CENTRE HALL, PA., THURS., NOV. 29

TERMS.—The terms of subscription to the Reporter are one dollar per year in advance.

OLD SUBSCRIBERS may pay One Dollar any time during 1900 and get the paper for one year beginning July 1, 1900.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS whose subscriptions are paid in advance of July 1st, 1900, will get the same credit as though the paper had not changed hands.

FOR TWENTY-FIVE CENTS the Reporter will be sent to new subscribers from now until January 1st.

ADVERTISEMENTS—30 cents per line for three insertions, and 5 cents per line for each subsequent insertion. Other rates made known on application.

The London papers think they hear in McKinley's victory an echo of Salisbury's khaki triumph.

Salisbury, conqueror of the Transvaal, praising McKinley would be conqueror of the Philippines, recalls the line, "A fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind."

Does not the unwritten laws against a third term prohibit Mark Hannah from running for the Presidency in 1904? If eligible he is the logical candidate to succeed McKinley in an era of "commercialism in politics."

The Democratic party needs no reconstruction. It stands for the right of the people, the integrity of the Constitution and the principles contained in the Declaration of Independence.

The party must wait for its vindication upon the arousal of the people to a realization of the facts after the present spirit of commercialism has run its course

Expansion nowhere proceeds so rapidly as in the expenditures of the government. The population has increased about one fifth in ten years but Congress has more than doubled the annual appropriations in that period and each session brings some new device calling for more money. No serious effort can be expected from the party now in power to lessen the burdens of taxation.

WAR TAXES WILL STAY.

On second thought, the Republican members of the committee of ways and means don't see how they can spare even as much as thirty million from the war taxes. While it is not admitted that the country is still at war, there is to be an increase of the standing army to a hundred thousand men, and that, with other increased military and naval expenses, and with steam ship subsidies and what not, will about use up the surplus.

The surplus this year is not so very large and there would not have been any if Congress had known just what the war taxes would produce. Indeed this surplus is mainly due to the fact that the river and harbor appropriations were held back. It has long been the rule for a Republican Congress to leave no money in the Treasury that can be got out of it, and if only a part of the present schemes for distributing the revenue become effective, it is useless to talk of reducing it.

Senator Proctor of the Senate committee on military affairs and Adjutant General Corbin of the War Department held an informal conference with the President relative to the legislation to be asked of Congress in connection with the proposed increase of the regular army.

"Under the existing law," said Senator Proctor, at the conclusion of the conference, "the present strength of the army, 65,000 regulars and 35,000 volunteers, will be reduced on the first day of next July to 25,000 regulars.

"This is an absurdly small number, and Congress will be asked by the President to reorganize the army upon a larger basis. It will be impossible to keep any troops in the Philippines unless the army is increased, to say nothing of the garrisons for the forts in this country.

"My own judgment is that Congress will provide a regular army of about 55,000 or 60,000 men, with discretion to the President to raise the total to 100,000 if he finds the larger number necessary. I have no doubt that this legislation will be enacted at the coming session."

THE NEW TREK.

Driven from the land which they conquered, reclaimed from savagery and made their home, the Boers are again spanning their oxen and trekking across the desert to find some place in South Africa where England will not follow them as the wolf-pack follows the flock. When they crossed the Vaal and made their homes on the veldt, they thought they were so far away and in so poor a country that England's greed would not be tempted, and by treaty they were assured that they would be safe from English aggression or interference.

But unfortunately for the Boers, they built their republic over an unsuspected reef of gold, and when the wealth was discovered, English pride became no more than smoke in the wind. It was far from Cape Town to Pretoria, but not far from the Lion to stretch his paw, smash the republic and fasten his claws in the golden reef. The Boer's dream of peace beyond the Vaal is over; the wave of British civilization has rolled across the Vaal and swept the Boer and his farm from the veldt; and he gathers up the wreckage and treks across the desert to Damaraland, where Germany offers him asylum beyond the reach of England.

Under what conditions the Boers will settle in Damaraland is not yet known. It is reported that Holland is willing to purchase for them a portion of the country from the Southwest African Company, a German concern; but it is also stated that the German Colonial Office stipulates that the trekkers shall obey German laws and promise that their children shall become German subjects. Under such terms, Boer independence is extinguished, republicanism in South Africa is at an end and England's crime against humanity is completed.

The construction of a new coal railroad to be known as the Susquehanna and Clearfield was authorized at a meeting of the New York Central directors last Friday. The line will be seventy-five miles in length, running from Clearfield to Karthaus, where it will connect with the P. E. and Beech Creek.

A thousand men will be put to work this winter on the line. Four tunnels will have to be constructed. A valuable coal and timber field will be thrown open when the road is completed.

Home." Mrs. von Klenner was one of the few women honored at the Paris exposition as the representative of the Garcia vocal method. She was invited by the French government to participate in the department of arts' exhibit.

Under her special supervision Mrs. von Klenner with infinite care prepared for the exhibition a comprehensive and exhaustive resume of her work as the Garcia exponent in America, showing minutely the progress of the method, together with reports of pupils, concerts and disquisitions on the fixity of the method in America and its thorough adaptation to the development of the voice and the art of singing.

EARL HALL.

Columbia University's New Building and Its Purpose.

Our great universities not only aim at the mental education of young men in their courses of study, but they also almost invariably raise the moral tone of their attendants. To that end in every college of importance there are various associations which have as their aim the spiritual and religious uplifting of their members. Sometimes such associations are sectarian, but more frequently they are ready to welcome students of any creed. The Young Men's Christian association has a branch in almost all of the large universities, and its influence for good is very great.

Besides the Young Men's Christian association, a few of the larger universities possess buildings, undenominational and unsectarian in character, which serve as centers of the spiritual life of the universities. Sometimes also the sectarian societies meet here on a common basis. Such a building is the one which is to be presented to Columbia university by William Earl Dodge, a millionaire New York merchant and philanthropist. Mr. Dodge has given hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Young Men's Christian association, more than any other individual helper. His gift to Columbia university will be known as Earl Hall. Mr. Dodge suggested to the trustees that it be under association management, because that is a permanent body, and added:

"It is my desire that the building should not be used for distinctly dogmatic or denominational teaching, but I want the charter under which it is administered to be so broadly interpreted as to permit organizations of Roman Catholic students or of Hebrew students, whose objects are to promote the spiritual and religious life of such students, to hold their meetings in this building as freely as any others. In a word, my desire is that the building shall be to Columbia what Barnes Hall is to Cornell, what Phillips Brooks House is to Harvard or what the parish house is to a city church—a center of religious and philanthropic activity."

Rural Free Delivery.

The system of free mail delivery in country districts was inaugurated so recently that many readers will probably be surprised to learn that it now employs the services of over twelve hundred regular carriers who transport letters, newspapers and packages to nearly nine hundred thousand persons in various portions of the United States. The report of First Assistant Postmaster-General Johnson shows that more than thirty-five millions of separate pieces of mail were handled by this branch of the department last year. In Pennsylvania the service has been put in operation in eight counties.

Congress made an appropriation of $1,750,000 for rural free delivery during the present fiscal year, and a strong effort will doubtless be made to have this sum increased for the twelve-month ending June 30, 1902. Testimony as to the working of the new plan is almost uniformly favorable. It is never adopted except in cases where the people of some community petition for it through their legislative representatives at Washington.

Five hundred dollars per annum is the regular salary of these officials, whose routes are expected to pass the homes of not fewer than one hundred families, and each carrier provides his own horse and vehicle without expense to the Treasury. On every day in the year, except Sundays, the specified territory must be covered, without regard to stormy weather, and in case of disability from illness or accident, the carrier is required to furnish an acceptable substitute.

The system, in spite of its comparatively rapid progress, is still in its infancy, and if it is honestly and efficiently managed, there seems to be no reason why it should not gradually extend until it covers a large proportion of the more thickly settled rural territory of the United States. Bringing, as it does, the country population into closer touch with the important towns it helps to lessen the sense of isolation in rural neighborhoods, and makes it possible for numbers of farmers to receive their mail as regularly as though they lived in cities. This single factor, in its contribution to popular enlightenment, is not the least of the arguments in its favor.
