A SHIP IN A CITY STREET.

San Francisco Has a Warehouse Built on a Stranded Hulk.
The Front street building which rests upon the wreck of a beached ship may be the only one of the sort in New York, but at least in one other city there is a similar structure and locally a better known one, for the reason that the building preserves the name of the ship.

This is in San Francisco, where none may aspire to rank in the pioneer or "forty-niner" class unless he can distinctly remember "when the water came up to Montgomery street," which relatively to the present pier and bulkhead line represents a distance much farther inland than Front street in New York. At the time when Montgomery street had only one side, being in reality the beach, the bay of San Francisco was crowded with all sorts of ships lying idle for the simple reason that all hands and the cook had skipped out for Sutter's Fort and the mines. It was impossible to get the ships discharged. Men would never consent to be stevedores on the beach when they could be millionaires at the mines. That is why many of the cargo ships were never broached except when there was need of something to fill up the mudholes on the beach streets. No argonaut would respect himself if he could not tell of the time when he saw the streets along the water front paved with plug tobacco in boxes.

One of this fleet, abandoned and derelict at her anchors, the good ship Niantic, parted her cables in one of the stiff winds for which the Golden Gate is notorious, drifted ashore on the mud flat at the foot of Clay street and found a convenient and sticky berth about a hundred yards offshore on the line of the present Sansome street.
The underwriters paid the loss, for at the current rate of wages and the absence of labor it would have cost half a dozen times her worth to get her off, and even then she would be of no use without sailors. Having paid the loss, the underwriters in turn abandoned her and probably felt in luck that they were not called upon by some owner of real estate to take the ship away.

The presence of the ship aided the settling up of the mud flat, and in a short time it was awash only at high tide and finally dry all day long. Then it was recognized that this was a new addition to the front of the city, and some business man took possession of the ship and made it over into a warehouse. The vessel was sound in every timber, spars all standing and sails on the yards, the hold as tight as a drum, and if she did make as much as a foot a month it was only a short trick at the pumps to clear it out. In fact, nothing could have been better for a warehouse and general chandlery. The hold made an excellent cellar, the floor of the second story was supported by the lower masts at the tops, the roof was fixed at the crossbeams, and the royal masts were left standing above the roof, with the signal halvards ready now, to serve for nagstays.

Gradually the building was altered and patched, and the traces of the original ship disappeared from view, but the name Niantic was a fixture, and people entering the warehouse continued to speak of coming aboard or coming over the side. When the city decided to expand at the expense of the bay and filled in the flats and formed Sansome and Battery and all the other streets which have put the wreck of the Niantic half a mile inland, the filling in buried out of sight the hull and channel plates of the ship, and it ceased to resemble anything that had ever floated. When this first building went into decay and was condemned, the old ship was found to be the soundest part of it all. But it was buried still deeper by the foundations of the large and for that time modern building that took its place. Now there is nothing of the ship left except the name of the building and the old mainmast, which runs up from story to story and is used to support its due share of the weight. Some of the pioneers stoutly aver that the mainmast of the Niantic prophesies the coming of gales upon the bay by the way it creaks for two or three days before the wind comes and that these forecasts are much more to be relied on than the guesses of the weather bureau.—New York Tribune.
