CROWN OR MAN.

Archduchess Stephanie's Choice and What It Cost Her.

It would appear that not only in ordinary society, but even in royal circles, a woman may be so snubbed as to make her position untenable. This is what happened to the Archduchess Stephanie of Austria on the occasion through her own fault she has fallen so much below her former position that most of her royal relatives have refused to recognize her.

She was the petted daughter of the king of Belgium, who loved her so devotedly that he utterly spoiled her. Every wish of hers was gratified, no one was allowed to oppse her slightest desire, and at 15 she practically ruled Belglum. Then came her brilliant wedding to the Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria. That was 20 years ago, and it is still remembered what a sensation the beautiful bride created.

Young, rich and the prospective queen of Austria, it seemed as if she had nothing left to desire. She was the most talked about woman on the continent and probably one of the most envied. Soon, however, it began to be rumored that the young couple did not get on happily, and shortly after the birth of their daughter they agreed to separate. Thanks to friends, the quarrel was patched up sufficiently so that they continued to live together under the same roof, although when away from the public eye their relations were those of utter strangers. The mysterious death of Rudolph put an end to this painful pretense. And now here comes the sequel to this romantic career. A year ago she fell in-love with Count Lonyal and six months ago was quietly married to bim. The aged emperor was indiguant and at once disinherited her, taking away all her palaces. She lives now very quietly on the count's estate, just outside of Vienna. Her most influential friends have deserted her, and only a short time ago the Prince and Princourt. It is not often that a woman gives up all chances of a throne for a man. In accepting the count Stephanie destroyed the last vestige of hope.
